LESLIE J. SHAW,

Plaintiff,

v.

CITIMORTGAGE, INC.; et al.,

Defendants.

ORDER

This is a breach of contract action arising from an alleged residential loan modification agreement between plaintiff Leslie J. Shaw (“Shaw”) and defendant CitiMortgage, Inc. (“CMI”). Shaw alleges that in mid-2011, the parties executed a loan modification agreement on his residential home loan, but CMI breached the agreement prompting Shaw to stop making payments on his modified loan. Shaw then fell into default and CMI initiated non-judicial foreclosure proceedings in early 2013.

On July 26, 2013, Shaw filed a complaint against CMI and defendant Northwest Trustee Services, Inc. (“NTS”), the trustee identified on the recorded notice of default. ECF No. 1, Exhibit A, p. 8-19. On April 3, 2014, Shaw filed an amended complaint adding defendant Bank of New York Mellon (“BNY”), as trustee for SASCO Fund 2003-37A, as a defendant to this action. ECF No. 52. Subsequently, on August 25, 2014, Shaw filed a second amended complaint against defendants alleging eight causes of action: (1) declaratory relief against defendant BNY; (2) declaratory relief against defendant CMI; (3) breach of contract; (4) breach of the implied covenants of good faith and fair dealing; (5) fraudulent misrepresentation and concealment;

(6) negligent misrepresentation; (7) interference with prospective economic advantage; and (8) violation of the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act (“RESPA”). ECF No. 109.

On January 14, 2015, the court granted defendant NTS’ motion to dismiss (ECF No. 110) and dismissed NTS as a defendant in this action. ECF No. 124. Three weeks later, on February 5, 2015, the court granted defendants BNY and CMI’s motion to dismiss (ECF No. 113). ECF No. 128. In that order, the court dismissed BNY as a defendant and dismissed Shaw’s fifth cause of action for fraudulent misrepresentation and sixth cause of action for negligent misrepresentation. Id.

A bench trial was held on Shaw’s remaining claims¹ against sole-remaining defendant CMI from May 3 through May 5, 2016. See ECF Nos. 203-05. The court, having heard the testimony of all witnesses at trial² and having considered all exhibits accepted into evidence, renders the following findings of fact and conclusions of law:³

I. Findings of Fact

1. Plaintiff Shaw is a resident of the State of Nevada. Shaw is also an attorney duly licensed to practice law in the States of Nevada and California. Shaw practices primarily in the areas of family and divorce law and during the relevant time period had a practice at Lake Tahoe that moved to Reno, Nevada.

² At trial the court heard the live testimony of plaintiff Leslie Shaw; Attorney Colt Dodrill, counsel of record for defendant CMI; Jill Hackman, business operations analyst and corporate representative of CMI; Dan Leck, Shaw’s real estate expert; and Michael Brunson, CMI’s real estate expert. The court also heard the testimony by deposition of Travis Nurse, CMI’s designated Rule 30(b)(6) witness; Christopher Gabbert, a CMI employee in the Executive Response Unit; Attorney Dana Ross, Assistant General Counsel for CMI; Katherine Barkley, junior lien holder; and Janice Shaw, Shaw’s ex-wife and junior lien holder.

³ If any finding of fact herein is considered to be a conclusion of law, or any conclusion of law is considered to be a finding of fact, it is the court’s intention that it be so considered.

- 1 2. In 2001, Shaw purchased a vacant lot located in Zephyr Cove, Nevada, and built a single-2 family residence commonly known as 251 McFaul Court (“the McFaul Court property”), 3 the underlying residential property at issue in this action.
- 4 3. On October 8, 2003, Shaw executed a promissory note for a residential home loan on the 5 McFaul Court property in favor of non-party Lehman Brothers Bank, FSB (“Lehman 6 Brothers”), a federal savings bank, in the amount of $875,000.00 with an adjustable 7 interest rate starting at 5.125%. The residential loan was secured by a first deed of trust 8 recorded against the McFaul Court property on October 14, 2003, in the official records of 9 Douglas County, Nevada (Doc. No. 0593479). Def. Trial Ex. 501-B, CMI000001-22.
- 10 4. Immediately following the execution of the residential home loan, non-party Aurora Loan 11 Services (“Aurora”), a servicing branch of Lehman Brothers, began servicing Shaw’s 12 residential loan and accepted all mortgage payments on behalf of non-party Lehman 13 Brothers. In June 2005, Aurora ceased servicing the loan and transferred the servicing 14 rights to CMI.
- 15 5. At some point prior to the relevant time period, Lehman Brothers sold Shaw’s residential 16 home loan as part of an investment mortgage package to an unknown party.
- 17 6. Defendant CMI, a foreign corporation duly qualified to conduct business in the State of 18 Nevada, is a mortgage servicing company. CMI is owned by non-party CitiBank and is 19 part of the Citi Group corporate organization. Since June 2005, CMI has been servicing 20 Shaw’s residential home loan and has collected all payments on behalf of the various 21 owners of the loan. On June 20, 2012, CMI became the beneficiary under the first deed of 22 trust pursuant to an assignment of deed of trust recorded in the official records of Douglas 23 County, Nevada (Doc. No. 0804389). Def. Trial Ex. 504-B, CMI000038-39.
- 24 7. Each mortgage account serviced by CMI is assigned an electronic account file. The 25 electronic account file, identified by a specific numerical identifier (the mortgage account 26 number), is accessible to CMI employees and contains information about each particular

1 account including payment information, loan terms, account notes, and other relevant 2 account information. As part of its servicing of Shaw's residential home loan, CMI
3 maintained such an electronic account file for Shaw's loan. It is in this electronic account 4 that CMI booked the terms of Shaw's residential loan and all payments made under that 5 agreement.

6 8. In August 2006, Shaw and his then wife, non-party Janice Shaw, separated. As part of 7 their eventual divorce - as evidenced by the divorce decree issued in July 2007 - Shaw 8 was awarded the McFaul Court property as his sole and separate property.

9 9. On or about January 19, 2007, Shaw obtained a loan from non-party Katherine Barkley in 10 the amount of $225,000.00 at an annual interest rate of 10%. This loan was secured by a 11 second deed of trust recorded against the McFaul Court property on January 23, 2007, in 12 the official records of Douglas County, Nevada (Doc. No. 0693296). Def. Trial Ex. 502-
13 B, CMI000023-27.

14 10. On September 20, 2007, a third deed of trust was recorded in the amount of $77,123.50 15 against the McFaul Court property in favor of non-party Janice Shaw, Shaw's ex-wife, in
17 B, CMI000028-37.

18 11. In 2010, Shaw began experiencing financial difficulties. On or about the fall of 2010, 19 while still current on his monthly mortgage payments, Shaw contacted CMI to request a 20 modification of his residential mortgage loan. At that time, Shaw's monthly mortgage 21 obligation was approximately $4,300.00.

22 12. During the relevant time period, CMI had a company policy that it would not consider any 23 application for the modification of an existing loan unless a borrower was at least three 24 (3) months in arrears on the borrower's monthly mortgage obligations. This policy was 25 communicated to Shaw during one of the telephonic conversations in the fall of 2010.

26 ///

- 1 13. Beginning October 2010, and continuing through December 2010, Shaw withheld his 2 monthly mortgage payments from CMI. Def. Trial Ex. 510-B, CMI000067. Shaw then 3 contacted CMI and received a loan modification application. Shaw completed and 4 submitted the application to CMI in early December 2010.
- 5 14. CMI reported Shaw's mortgage account as delinquent to the various credit reporting 6 agencies for the months that Shaw withheld payment on his account: October, November, 7 and December 2010.
- 8 15. At the time he submitted his loan modification application Shaw had never, in memory, 9 been denied an application for credit and was current on all credit obligations except for 10 his mortgage account.
- 11 16. On December 24, 2010, Shaw received an e-mail from CMI. Pl. Trial Ex. 1, P00001. The 12 e-mail advised Shaw that his "mortgage assistance request [had] been approved" and he 13 could expect a "mortgage solution package within the next 5-7 business days." Id.
- 14 17. On December 28, 2010, four days after receiving CMI's approval e-mail, Shaw received a 15 letter from CMI denying his request for a loan modification. Pl. Trial Ex. 2, P00002-5.
16 The letter specifically stated that CMI could not "approve a mortgage modification under 17 the government's Home Affordable Modification Program ("HAMP")" and that Shaw's 18 "mortgage terms [would] remain unchanged." Id. at P00002. At the time Shaw received 19 this letter from CMI, he had not applied for a specific HAMP loan modification. Rather, 20 Shaw had only applied for a general loan modification with defendant CMI.⁴

22 ⁴ During the relevant time period, CMI had a policy that when a borrower submitted a completed loan 23 modification application, Loss Mitigation would review the application for all available modification options - 24 from company modification options to government supported modification programs like HAMP. However, 25 it was not CMI's policy to advise or disclose to applicants that an application would be reviewed by Loss 26 Mitigation for all possible modification options including government programs. Nor was it CMI's policy to 27 advise or disclose to applicants that they may receive several responses from CMI concerning the outcome of 28 an application and that such responses could differ in whether an application was approved or denied.

29 In accordance with CMI's policies, Loss Mitigation reviewed Shaw's application and determined, 30 through an underwriter, that Shaw was eligible for a modification of his existing residential loan but was

1 18. Commencing on or about December 28, 2010, and continuing through February 2011, 2 Shaw began near daily telephonic efforts with CMI to resolve the inconsistent and 3 contradictory written communications of December 24 and December 28, 2010. Despite 4 repeated phone calls with CMI employees in various departments, including Loss 5 Mitigation, Shaw never received an explanation as to why he received two separate 6 communications from CMI about his loan modification application, or why he had been 7 denied a modification after already receiving notification that his application had been 8 approved.⁵ Further, Shaw did not receive an answer from CMI as to which of the two 9 communications constituted CMI's final determination of his loan modification 10 application.

11 19. Shaw did not make either of his monthly mortgage payments for January or February 12 2011. Def. Trial Ex. 510-B, CMI000067. Subsequently, CMI reported Shaw's mortgage 13 account as delinquent to the various credit reporting agencies for those months.

14 20. Between December 28, 2010, and early February 2011, Shaw did not receive any written 15 communication from CMI concerning his loan modification application.

16 21. On February 15, 2011, Shaw received another e-mail from CMI. Pl. Trial Ex. 3, P00006.
17 This e-mail again advised Shaw that his "mortgage assistance request [had] been 18 approved" and that he could expect a "mortgage solution package within the next 5-7

22 ineligible for a HAMP modification. But Shaw was never advised that his application would be considered for 23 all available modification options, that he would receive multiple responses from CMI about his application, that those responses could be contradictory (as they were in this case), and which of those responses would constitute CMI's final determination of his application.

24 ⁵ At trial, it was explained for the first time that Shaw had received a separate response on his loan 25 modification application relating specifically to the government's HAMP program because any denial of a 26 modification under HAMP must be directly communicated to the buyer and contain the reasons for the denial along with information related to other loan modification programs and credit counseling. This simple explanation was never provided to Shaw throughout the history of this action.

- 1 22. On or about February 16, 2011, after receiving CMI's second approval e-mail, Shaw
2 received another letter from CMI again denying his request for a loan modification. Pl.
3 Trial Ex. 4, P00007-10. The letter specifically stated that CMI could not "approve a 4 mortgage modification under the government's Home Affordable Modification Program 5 ("HAMP")" and that Shaw's "mortgage terms [would] remain unchanged." Id. at P00007.
- 6 23. Commencing February 16, 2011, Shaw again contacted CMI to resolve the inconsistent 7 and contradictory written communications concerning his loan modification application.
8 Despite repeated calls with CMI employees, Shaw never received an explanation why he 9 had received new communications regarding his application,⁶ or why he had once again 10 been denied mortgage assistance after receiving notification that his loan modification 11 application had been approved. Further, Shaw did not receive an answer from CMI as to 12 which of the four communications constituted CMI's final determination of his loan 13 modification application.
- 14 24. On or about February 23, 2011, Shaw received a mortgage solution package from CMI.
15 Def. Trial Ex. 505-A, CMI000051-56. The mortgage solution package advised Shaw that 16 he had been "approved to enter into a trial period plan" modifying his residential loan for 17 a period of ninety (90) days. Id. at CMI000051. The package further advised Shaw that in 18 order to qualify for a permanent modification, Shaw must comply with two requirements.
19 First, Shaw was required to timely make three modified monthly mortgage payments of 21 ⁶ At trial, it was explained that Shaw had received two separate sets of written communications, first 22 in December 2010 and then again in February 2011, because of the amount of principal remaining on his 23 residential loan. In December 2010, an underwriter for CMI approved Shaw for a modification of his existing 24 loan obligations. Based on that decision, the first set of communications was sent to Shaw in December 2010.

25 However, because Shaw's remaining principal obligation was substantial (over $800,000), the original 26 underwriter did not have final authority on Shaw's application and a manager-level underwriter had to 27 separately review Shaw's application and make a final determination on whether to approve or deny the 28 application. Upon review, this manager-level underwriter approved Shaw's application and another set of 29 communications was sent to Shaw in February 2011. Once again, this simple explanation was never provided 30 to Shaw throughout the history of this action.

1 $3,079.30 starting March 2011. Id. Second, Shaw was required to submit various 2 documents to CMI. Id. If Shaw complied with both requirements, CMI advised Shaw that 3 his residential home loan would be “permanently modified” and it would send him “a 4 modification agreement detailing the terms of the modified loan.” Id. at CMI000052.

5 25. Shaw timely made all three required trial payments of $3,079.30 under the trial period 6 plan for the months of March, April, and May 2011. Def. Trial Ex. 510-B, CMI000067.

7 26. CMI reported Shaw delinquent on his mortgage account to the various credit reporting
8 agencies for the months of March, April, and May 2011, despite granting Shaw a trial 9 modification plan and having received all three modified payments in a timely manner. By 10 this time, Shaw had been reported delinquent on his mortgage account for eight months.

11 27. During the time period after submitting his loan modification application through the time 12 of the trial modification plan, Shaw received various collection calls from CMI seeking 13 payment on his delinquent account. Approximately April 2011, Shaw registered for 14 CMI’s no-call list, thereby precluding CMI from initiating telephonic contact with Shaw.
15 Since that time, Shaw has received no telephonic attempts to collect on his mortgage 16 account.

17 28. On May 11, 2011, having submitted all trial plan payments, Shaw received an e-mail from 18 CMI advising him that his “mortgage assistance documents [had] been sent” the previous 19 day, May 10, 2011. Pl. Trial Ex. 5, P00011. The e-mail further directed Shaw to “review 20 and sign the documents as instructed.” Id.

21 29. On May 18, 2011, Shaw received a letter from CMI authored by CMI employee Kim 22 Vukovich (“Vukovich”). Pl. Trial Ex. 6, P00014-20. The letter advised Shaw that he was 23 “eligible for a Citi Affordable Modification” and directed him to complete and return the 24 enclosed modification agreement (also prepared by Vukovich) no later than May 20, 25 2011. Id. at P00014. The enclosed proposed modification agreement, titled “Citi 26 Affordable Modification Agreement” (“May 2011 Modification Agreement”), outlined

1 the various terms of the proposed loan modification. Id. at P00016-20. Those terms 2 included, in relevant part to this action, that: (1) permanent modified payments in the 3 amount of $3,079.30⁷ would commence starting June 1, 2011; (2) the new principal 4 balance under the modified loan would be set at $910,110.34 and include all past due 5 amounts, including the difference between the original monthly payment amount 6 (approximately $4,300) and the payment amount made under the three months of the trial 7 modification plan ($3,079.30); (3) $85,777.89 of the new principal balance was deferred 8 from interest charges during the life of the modification and would be due as a balloon
9 payment; (4) the effective date of the properly executed agreement would be May 1, 2011; 10 and (5) the maturity date under the modified loan would be November 1, 2033. Id.

11 30. Also on May 18, 2011, Shaw promptly executed, by notarized signature, the May 2011
13 Next Day Air envelope. Pl. Trial Ex. 6, P00013; Def. Trial Ex. 506-A, CMI000061.

14 31. On May 19, 2011, CMI received the executed May 2011 Modification Agreement.
15 Pl. Trial Ex. 7, P00021.

16 32. On May 23, 2011, CMI entered and booked the terms of the May 2011 Modification 17 Agreement into Shaw's electronic mortgage account. Def. Trial Ex. 510-B, CMI000066.
18 At the time CMI booked the terms of the modification, CMI misentered the length of the 19 loan, extending the loan from three hundred and sixty (360) months to four hundred and 20 eighty (480) months. Id. This administrative booking error extended the loan maturity 21 date and subsequent due date of the $85,777.89 balloon payment from November 1, 2033, 22 to November 1, 2045.

24 ⁷ The proposed modification agreement contained a staggered payment and interest rate schedule that 25 increased the monthly payment on Shaw's modified loan over the course of several years. See Pl. Trial Ex. 6, 26 P000018. However, for purposes of this order and the relevant time period, Shaw's modified payment was $3,079.30. Id.

1 33. Shaw timely made his modified mortgage payments of $3,079.30 for the months of June 2 and July 2011. Def. Trial Ex. 510-B, CMI000066.

3 34. On June 30, 2011, Larry Bauman, Vice-President for CMI, executed, by notarized
4 signature, the May 2011 Modification Agreement. Def. Trial Ex. 506-A, CMI000061;
5 Pl. Trial Ex. 18, P00055-56.

6 35. From May 20, 2011, through mid-July 2011, Shaw did not receive any communication 7 from CMI concerning the May 2011 Modification Agreement and was not informed that 8 the agreement had been executed by CMI.

9 36. Prior to July 2011, Shaw maintained, in good standing, a Diners Club Charge Card credit 10 account and had sufficient credit to qualify as a cosigner on his daughter's student loans 11 obtained through non-party Wells Fargo Bank. At that time, Shaw was also at the tail end 12 of a thirty-six (36) month lease agreement with non-party Audi Financial Services on a 13 2008 Audi A-4 automobile.

14 37. Approximately early-July 2011, Loss Mitigation reviewed Shaw's mortgage account and 15 unilaterally determined that there was an issue with the modified terms of his residential 16 loan booked pursuant to the May 2011 Modification Agreement documents. Loss 17 Mitigation then, without consultation or communication with Shaw, unbooked the May 18 2011 Modification Agreement from Shaw's electronic mortgage account. Def. Trial Ex.
19 510-B, CMI000065-66. This action automatically unbooked Shaw's timely made 20 modified mortgage payments under both the trial and permanent modification periods, 21 and placed his account in default. Id. As Shaw's account then showed that no payment 22 had been made on his account for the months of June and July 2011, CMI reported 23 Shaw's account as delinquent to the various credit reporting agencies for those months.

24 38. On July 15, 2011, non-party BMO Financial Group sent Shaw a letter advising him that 25 his Diners Club Charge Card account, a credit account with Citicorp Credit Services, Inc., 26 was going to be closed effective July 20, 2011. Pl. Trial Ex. 50, P00022.

1 39. On July 16, 2011, non-party U.S. Bank, National Association sent Shaw a letter advising
2 him that his credit application for an auto loan to purchase his leased 2008 Audi A-4 3 automobile had been denied. Pl. Trial Ex. 51, P00023.

4 40. On July 18, 2011, CMI sent Shaw a letter advising him that his mortgage account was in 5 default and that monthly mortgage payments had not been made as required under his 6 residential home loan. Pl. Trial Ex. 10, P00035-36. In that letter, CMI further demanded
7 Shaw pay, in full, the past due amount of $31,684.34 by August 18, 2011, or the McFaul 8 Court property could be sold in accordance with the terms of the first deed of trust. Id. at 9 P00035.

10 41. On July 19, 2011, CMI sent Shaw a letter authored by CMI employee Juan Mayorga 11 (“Mayorga”).⁸ Pl. Trial Ex. 9, P00025-33. This letter again advised Shaw that he was 12 “eligible for a Citi Affordable Modification” and directed him to complete and return the 13 new “corrected” modification agreement (separately prepared by Mayorga) no later than 14 August 2, 2011. Id. at P00025. The enclosed “corrected” modification agreement, again 15 titled “Citi Affordable Modification Agreement” (“July 2011 Modification Agreement”), 16 outlined the various terms and provisions of the new agreement. Id. at P00027-33. The 17 majority of the terms in the July 2011 Modification Agreement were similar, or even 18 identical, to the terms and provisions of the May 2011 Modification Agreement, including 19 that: (1) permanent modified payments of $3,079.30 would commence starting June 1, 20 2011;⁹ (2) the modified principal balance was set at $910,110.34; (3) $85,777.89 of the

23 ⁸ No mention was made during the course of trial as to why Mayorga had been assigned to Shaw’s 24 account to draft the “corrected” modification agreement or what happened to Vukovich during that two month 25 period.

26 ⁹ This June 1, 2011 date was still established as the first due date for modified payments even though the July 2011 Modification Agreement was not drafted until some time in July 2011, and sent to Shaw on July 19, 2011.

1 payment; (4) the effective date of the properly executed agreement would be May 1, 2011;
2 and (5) the maturity date under the modified residential loan would be November 1, 2033.
3 Id. However, the July 2011 Modification Agreement also included specific language 4 establishing the due date of the deferred principal balloon payment that was not in the 5 May 2011 Modification Agreement. Compare Pl. Trial Ex. 6 at P00018 (no date) with Pl.
6 Trial Ex. 9 at P00028 (establishing the maturity date of the modified loan (November 1, 7 2033) as the due date). Further, the “corrected” agreement contained several additional 8 provisions that were not in the May 2011 Modification Agreement, including Section 9 5(G). Id. at P00032. Section 5(G) required, in pertinent part, that under the July 2011
10 Modification Agreement Shaw would be required to execute any and all other documents 11 requested by CMI or forfeit all his rights under the modified agreement. Id. (“If I elect not 12 to sign any such corrected documentation, the terms of the original Loan Documents shall 13 continue in full force and effect, such terms will not be modified by this Agreement, and I 14 will not be eligible for a modification . . .”).

15 42. On July 20, 2011, Shaw received an e-mail from CMI advising him that “mortgage 16 assistance documents” had been sent on July 19, 2011. Pl. Trial Ex. 8, P00024. The 17 communication further directed Shaw to “review and sign the documents as instructed.”
18 Id. On the same day, Shaw received CMI’s communications dated July 18 and July 19, 19 2011. Shaw immediately contacted CMI, including a conversation with Mayorga, but was 20 never provided an explanation why his mortgage account was placed in default, or why a 21 new modification agreement had been sent only two months after he executed and 22 submitted the May 2011 Modification Agreement. Instead, Shaw was directed to review 23 and sign the July 2011 Modification Agreement.¹⁰

25 ¹⁰ At trial, it was established that the May 2011 Modification Agreement was missing language in the 26 balloon payment provision setting a specific due date for the balloon payment, although the agreement contained the correct loan maturity date of November 1, 2033. Thus, when CMI received the executed

1 43. On July 21, 2011, Shaw sent a letter to Mayorga objecting to CMI's handling of his 2 mortgage account, including CMI's unilateral decision to unbook the May 2011 3 Modification Agreement and place his mortgage account in default, as well as the 4 additional material terms in the July 2011 Modification Agreement not present in the May 5 2011 Modification Agreement. Pl. Trial Ex. 13, P00040.

6 44. Shaw did not execute the July 2011 Modification Agreement.

7 45. On July 22, 2011, Shaw received a letter from CMI dated July 20, 2011, advising him that 8 CMI had reviewed his loan modification application and could not approve a modification 9 at that time. Pl. Trial Ex. 11, P00037-38. CMI sent the letter to Shaw even though it had 10 already executed the May 2011 Modification Agreement and sent the separate July 2011
11 Modification Agreement.

12 46. Also on July 22, 2011, Shaw received an e-mail from CMI advising Shaw that his 13 "mortgage assistance documents [had] been received by [CMI.]" Pl. Trial Ex. 12, P00039.
14 However, Shaw had not submitted any mortgage assistance documents to CMI and had 15 refused to execute the July 2011 Modification Agreement.

16 47. Commencing late July 2011, Shaw again contacted CMI to resolve the inconsistent and 17 contradictory communications received during the previous weeks including why he had 18 received a loan modification denial letter after having just received the July 2011 19 Modification Agreement. Once again, Shaw did not receive any explanation from CMI for 20 these contradictory communications.

23 agreement and booked the modification terms into Shaw's electronic mortgage account, CMI mistakenly 24 entered a 480 month term for the balloon payment, thereby extending Shaw's loan past the maturity date. When 25 Loss Mitigation audited Shaw's mortgage account in July 2011, it determined that a "corrected" modification 26 agreement should be sent to Shaw containing a specific due date for the balloon payment, that of the maturity date of November 1, 2033. This "corrected" agreement was sent to Shaw in order to correct CMI's own mistake. However, no explanation was ever provided at trial as to why the July 2011 Modification Agreement, if all it was supposed to do was correct the balloon payment language error, contained additional material terms like Section 5(G), which placed additional duties and obligations on Shaw.

1 48. Approximately July 2011, in response to Shaw's near daily communications with CMI, 2 CMI deemed Shaw's mortgage account an Escalated Case and turned his account over to 3 the Executive Response Unit, a CMI department dedicated to addressing customer 4 account issues. Shaw's account was placed with Chris Gabbert ("Gabbert"), a 5 Homeowner Support Specialist in the Executive Response Unit. Shaw contacted Gabbert
6 to outline and discuss his ongoing mortgage and modification issues. At that time, 7 Gabbert advised Shaw that the July 2011 Modification Agreement was the only 8 modification agreement that CMI would accept, directed him to execute the agreement, 9 and informed him that there was not a prior modification of his residential loan under the 10 May 2011 Modification Agreement.

11 49. As a result of CMI's repeated inconsistent communications and complete lack of any 12 explanation for CMI's conduct in handling his mortgage account and loan modification, 13 Shaw experienced increasing confusion, frustration, stress, and a general feeling of 14 worthlessness over not being able to resolve his issues with CMI. This frustration and 15 stress caused Shaw to suffer occasional sleeplessness during this time. Further, Shaw 16 spent significant amounts of time and energy, sometimes as much as eight (8) hours in a 17 single day, contacting CMI and dealing with various CMI employees that were unable to 18 address his concerns or help with his mortgage and modification issues.

19 50. Due to Shaw's ongoing frustration in dealing with CMI, Shaw sought the identity of the 20 owner/beneficiary of his loan in the hopes of resolving his problems directly with the 21 loan's owner.

22 51. Between July 25 and July 28, 2011, Shaw contacted Gabbert several times. In those 23 telephonic conversations, Shaw requested information about the current owner of his loan.
24 Gabbert advised Shaw that the current owner of his loan was Lehman Brothers through 25 Structured Asset Security Corporation ("SASCO") Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates.

26 ///

- 1 52. On July 31, 2011, Shaw again e-mailed Gabbert. Pl. Trial Ex. 15, P00044-45. In that e-2 mail, Shaw specifically requested information related to the owner of his loan, as Shaw 3 had determined on his own that Lehman Brothers had previously gone bankrupt and the 4 SASCO Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates that included his residential loan had been 5 transferred to a new, unknown owner. Id.
- 6 53. Shaw requested contact information for the current owner of his loan in order to seek a 7 modification directly from the owner and to make sure that he was receiving credit from 8 the owner for payments made on the mortgage.
- 9 54. Shaw timely made a modified mortgage payment in the amount of $3,079.30 for the 10 month of August 2011. Def. Trial Ex. 510-B, CMI000065. CMI did not book Shaw's 11 payment into his electronic mortgage account.
- 12 55. Approximately August 2011, Shaw applied for and was denied credit with non-party Audi 13 Financial Services to purchase his Audi automobile which he had been leasing from Audi 14 for approximately four (4) years.
- 15 56. On August 2, 2011, CMI sent Shaw another letter again advising Shaw that his mortgage 16 account was in default and demanded Shaw pay, in full, the past due amount of 17 $31,697.84 by September 2, 2011, or the McFaul Court property could be sold in 18 accordance with the terms of the first deed of trust. Pl. Trial Ex. 16, P00046-47.
- 19 57. On August 9, 2011, CMI sent Shaw a letter from the Document Processing Modification 20 Unit that included a copy of the completed and executed May 2011 Modification 21 Agreement signed by CMI Vice-President Bauman. Pl. Trial Ex. 18, P00049-56. The 22 letter advised Shaw that the copy of the agreement executed by both parties was solely for 23 his records and that "no further action [was] necessary." Id.
- 24 58. Upon receiving his copy of the executed May 2011 Modification Agreement, Shaw 25 immediately contacted Gabbert who initiated the involvement of Dana Ross ("Ross"), 26 Assistant General Counsel of CMI, to resolve Shaw's mortgage account and loan 1 modification.

2 59. On August 12, 2011, after reviewing Shaw's account and the May 2011 Modification
3 Agreement, Ross advised Shaw that he would be receiving a letter outlining CMI's 4 resolution of Shaw's mortgage account and loan modification. Pl. Trial Ex. 22, P00061.

5 60. On August 15, CMI rebooked the terms of the May 2011 Modification Agreement into 6 Shaw's electronic mortgage account. Def. Trial Ex. 510-B, CMI000064. As of that date, 7 Shaw's account reflected all of the modification terms outlined in the May 2011 8 Modification Agreement, including principal amount, deferred principal amount, and 9 modified payment amounts. See Pl. Trial Ex. 19, P00057-58. CMI also rebooked all 10 payments Shaw made under the trial period plan and the May 2011 Modification 11 Agreement to date. These actions brought Shaw's mortgage account current and removed 12 his account from default.

13 61. On August 23, 2011, Ross sent Shaw an e-mail advising him that CMI had resolved the 14 issues on his account and directed him to access a document on his online mortgage 15 account constituting CMI's resolution. Pl. Trial Ex. 20, P00059. The aforementioned 16 document was a letter signed by Gabbert explaining the actions CMI took on Shaw's 17 mortgage account in July 2011, and outlining CMI's resolution of his account and 18 modification. Pl. Trial Ex. 21, P00060. The resolution document advised Shaw that 19 although the May 2011 Modification Agreement did not have clear balloon payment 20 language (as no due date was specifically mentioned in that provision), the agreement 21 correctly identified the appropriate maturity date for the loan (November 1, 2033), and 22 thus, "there [was] nothing legally deficient with the [May 2011 Modification 23 Agreement.]" Id. Further, the resolution document advised Shaw that CMI had already 24 rebooked the May 2011 Modification Agreement and that his account was permanently 25 modified under that agreement going forward. Id.

26 ///

1 62. Shaw believed that he had a binding loan modification with CMI and that all his account
2 issues had been resolved. Thereafter, Shaw timely made all modified monthly payments 3 of $3,079.30 pursuant to the May 2011 Modification Agreement through December 2011.
4 Def. Trial Ex. 510-B, CMI000063-64.

5 63. Beginning in September and continuing through December 2011, Shaw received sporadic 6 written collection notices from CMI that consisted of formal collection notices and 7 informal door hangers left in plain view at the McFaul Court property, demanding 8 payment on past due amounts. Whenever he received a collection notice, Shaw contacted 9 the telephone number on that notice. However, Shaw was repeatedly told by various CMI 10 employees that because Shaw's account had been transferred to the Executive Response 11 Unit, only his dedicated Homeowner Support Specialist was allowed to deal with, discuss, 12 and handle his account issues. Shaw would then contact and advise Gabbert that he was 13 still receiving collection notices from CMI despite the rebooking of the May 2011 14 Modification Agreement and the inclusion of all past due amounts into his new principal 15 balance.

16 64. Sometime in the fall of 2011, Shaw applied for and was denied credit as a cosigner on his 17 daughter's student loans through non-party Wells Fargo Bank for the 2011-12 school year.

18 65. Throughout the fall of 2011, Shaw repeatedly sought the identity and contact information 19 for the owner of his residential home loan from CMI. Shaw's efforts consisted of various 20 telephonic and written requests to Gabbert. In response to these requests, Gabbert advised 21 Shaw of different owners at different times. Lehman Brothers through SASCO Mortgage 22 Pass-Through Certificates was identified, non-party Aurora Loan Services was identified, 23 and even CMI itself was identified as the owner.

24 66. On December 5, 2011, Shaw attempted to e-mail Gabbert requesting specific information 25 about his loan - including copies of the original note, deed of trust, and any assignment of 26 rights - as well as contact information for the current owner of his loan as Shaw had

1 previously received such inconsistent information about the owner from CMI. See Def.
2 Trial Ex. 512-A. At that time, Shaw was informed that Gabbert was no longer employed
3 with CMI. Shaw then forwarded the email directly to Ross, CMI's Assistant General 4 Counsel. Def. Trial Ex. 512-A.

5 67. On December 8, 2011, CMI sent Shaw a letter advising him that his account had been 6 transferred to a new Homeowner Support Specialist in the Executive Response Unit, 7 Jennifer Butler ("Butler"). Pl. Trial Ex. 23, P00062-63. Shaw contacted Butler to outline
8 his account history and discuss CMI's ongoing collection efforts despite his resolved loan 9 modification. Butler informed Shaw that Shaw did not have any loan modification with 10 CMI because he had not yet signed the July 2011 Modification Agreement. Shaw 11 provided Butler all prior communications allegedly resolving his modification, but was 12 then informed that CMI's Loss Mitigation and underwriting departments had confirmed 13 that Shaw did not have a loan modification with CMI at that time, and would not have any 14 modification with CMI unless and until he executed and submitted the July 2011
15 Modification Agreement.

16 68. Upon now being informed that he did not have a binding loan modification with CMI
17 under the May 2011 Modification Agreement, Shaw did not make his modified mortgage 18 payment of $3079.30 for the month of January 2012. Def. Trial Ex. 510-B, CMI000063.
19 Since January 2012, Shaw has not made any payments on his mortgage account. See Def.
20 Trial Ex. 510-B, CMI000062-63; Def. Trial Ex. 511-B.

21 69. On January 3, 2012, Shaw again e-mailed Ross, CMI's Assistant General Counsel, 22 requesting information related to his loan and informing Ross that he was withholding all 23 mortgage payments until CMI officially and finally resolved his account under the May 24 2011 Modification Agreement. Pl. Trial Ex. 24, P00064-65. Ross responded and informed 25 Shaw that she had reached out to CMI Senior Management for the information Shaw had 26 requested. Id.

- 1 70. On January 9, 2012, CMI sent Shaw a letter in response to his recent request advising him 2 that non-party Aurora was the owner of his mortgage. Pl. Trial Ex. 25, P00066. Shaw then 3 contacted Aurora and was informed by Aurora that it was not the owner of his mortgage 4 and had no involvement in either his mortgage account or his loan modification since 5 transferring the servicing rights to CMI. See Pl. Trial Ex. 26, P00067-69.
- 6 71. On January 20, 2012, Shaw sent Ross a formal letter outlining the information obtained 7 from Aurora that it was not the owner of his residential home loan and requested correct 8 ownership information, as well as all documents related to his mortgage account. Pl. Trial 9 Ex. 26, P00067-69.
- 10 72. Approximately February 2012, Shaw's mortgage account was placed in default.
- 11 73. On February 13, 2012, CMI sent Shaw another letter again identifying the owner of his 12 loan as non-party Aurora. Pl. Trial Ex. 31, P00099.
- 13 74. On February 23, 2012, Shaw e-mailed Butler after receiving another collection notice 14 requesting she contact him to resolve his loan modification issues. Pl. Trial Ex. 26, 15 P00070.
- 16 75. On March 12, 2012, Shaw received an e-mail from Butler outlining CMI's final position
17 concerning his loan modification. Pl. Trial Ex. 27, P00068. The e-mail informed Shaw 18 that he did not have a loan modification with CMI under the May 2011 Modification 19 Agreement and would not have any modification of his residential loan unless and until 20 Shaw executed the July 2011 Modification Agreement. Id. Butler then sent Shaw another 21 copy of the July 2011 Modification Agreement. Pl. Trial Ex. 29, P00074-85.
- 22 76. On March 16, 2012, Shaw e-mailed Butler requesting confirmation that it was CMI's final 23 position that the May 2011 Modification Agreement executed by both parties was not in 24 force. Pl. Trial Ex. 30, P00086. Butler responded and confirmed that CMI was not 25 recognizing the May 2011 Modification Agreement and was not changing its position that 26 Shaw had to sign the July 2011 Modification Agreement. Id. at P00088. Further, Butler

1 advised Shaw that because he refused to sign the July 2011 Modification Agreement, his 2 Escalated Case file with the Executive Response Unit was closed and she would no longer 3 communicate with Shaw about his mortgage account. Id. at P00088; P00093. At that 4 point, Shaw's Escalated Case with the Executive Response unit was closed and he 5 received no further communication from Butler.

6 77. Two months later, on May 30, 2012, CMI sent Shaw a letter advising him that his 7 mortgage account had again been deemed an Escalated Case and had been transferred to a 8 new Homeowner Support Specialist in the Executive Response Unit, Robert Orcutt 9 ("Orcutt"). Pl. Trial Ex. 33, P00101-02. Shaw contacted Orcutt and outlined the history of 10 his mortgage account and CMI's inconsistent positions on his loan modification. Orcutt 11 advised Shaw that he would review Shaw's mortgage account and contact him to resolve 12 his account issues.

13 78. On June 13, 2012, Orcutt sent Shaw an e-mail outlining a proposed reinstatement of 14 Shaw's mortgage account. Pl. Trial Ex. 35, P00104-06. The reinstatement offer provided 15 that if Shaw paid a past due amount of $18,534.34 by June 30, 2012, CMI would reinstate 16 Shaw's mortgage account and remove his account from default. Id. at P00105. However, 17 the reinstatement offer made no mention of any loan modification or the terms of Shaw's 18 loan going forward after reinstatement. Shaw contacted Orcutt and asked whether CMI 19 would recognize the May 2011 Modification Agreement if he made the reinstatement 20 payment but was not given any assurance that CMI would rebook the modification 21 agreement or not require him to execute the July 2011 Modification Agreement 22 documents at some time in the future. Shaw refused the reinstatement offer and did not 23 make any reinstatement payment.

24 79. On June 20, 2012, Shaw e-mailed Orcutt and requested contact information for the 25 representative or trustee of the SASCO 2003-37A Mortgage Pass-Through Certificates, 26 the bundled mortgage investment that included Shaw's residential home loan. Pl. Trial

1 Ex. 36, P00107. In response, Orcutt provided Shaw with the e-mail contact of non-party
2 Deborah Lenhart, a representative of the bondholders of the SASCO Mortgage Pass-3 Through Certificates 2003-37A.

4 80. On June 21, 2012, Shaw sent an e-mail to Deborah Lenhart at the contact information
5 provided by Orcutt, but the e-mail was returned as undeliverable. Pl. Trial Ex. 37, 6 P00110-111.

7 81. On June 22, 2012, Shaw again contacted Orcutt to request correct contact information for 8 Lenhart, or another representative, as the information Orcutt provided was incorrect. Pl.
9 Trial Ex. 37, P00112-114. Orcutt informed Shaw that he did not have any other contact 10 information for Lenhart. Pl. Trial Ex. 37, P00115.

11 82. On June 26, 2012, Shaw received an e-mail from CMI stating that his online account had 12 been suspended and that he would no longer be able to receive online statements or access 13 his online account. Pl. Trial Ex. 37, P00117.

14 83. In August 2012, Shaw moved out of the McFaul Court property.

15 84. At the end of 2012, CMI began foreclosure proceedings on the McFaul Court property. In 16 response, Shaw placed the McFaul Court property up for sale as a short sale with non-17 party Pinnacle Realty.

18 85. On January 3, 2013, dismissed defendant NTS recorded a Notice of Default and Election 19 to Sell Under Deed of Trust in the official records of Douglas County, Nevada (Doc. No.
20 0815587). Def. Trial Ex. 505-B, CMI000042-47.

21 86. On January 29, 2013, Shaw sent a letter to CMI objecting to the pending foreclosure of 22 the McFaul Court property and again requesting information and documents pertaining to 23 his residential loan. Pl. Trial Ex. 38, P00120-22.

24 87. On February 5, 2013, Shaw received an e-mail from attorney Joseph E. Bleeker on behalf
25 of both CMI and dismissed defendant NTS. Pl. Trial Ex. 39, P00123-24. The e-mail 26 informed Shaw that attorney Bleeker was in receipt of Shaw's January 29, 2013 letter and

1 was treating that letter as a “Qualified Written Request” pursuant to RESPA. Id. Attorney 2 Bleeker then advised Shaw that CMI would respond to his letter within sixty days as 3 required under RESPA. Id.

4 88. On February 8, 2013, Shaw received and accepted an offer on the McFaul Court property 5 from non-parties Jeff and Cathy Knapp (“the Knapps”). Pl. Trial Ex. 40, P00125-135. The 6 offer was a contingent short sale offer with a purchase price of $857,000.00 (“the Knapp 7 Offer”).

8 89. At the time of the Knapp Offer, Shaw owed approximately $900,000.00 to CMI on the 9 residential loan and approximately $250,000.00 on the two junior liens for a total liability 10 on the McFaul Court Property of approximately $1,150,000.

11 90. On February 14, 2013, Shaw forwarded to CMI, through his real estate agent, the accepted
12 Knapp Offer. Pl. Trial Ex. 44, P00202.

13 91. On February 25, 2013, Shaw received a letter from CMI advising him that pursuant to the 14 terms of the May 2011 Modification Agreement, Shaw’s modified payments would be 15 increasing from $3079.30 to $3,539.22 starting June 1, 2013. Pl. Trial Ex. 42, P00138.
16 Shaw received this letter despite CMI repeatedly informing Shaw as early as December 17 2011, that he did not have a loan modification with CMI under the May 2011
18 Modification Agreement.

19 92. On March 6, 2013, Shaw received a package from Kristin Dennis, a Default Research 20 Specialist at CMI, in response to Shaw’s January 29, 2013 “Qualified Written Request.”
21 Pl. Trial Ex. 43, P00139-87. The package included copies of Shaw’s account history with 22 CMI from February 2006 through March 2013 (Id. at P00140-49); CMI’s transaction
23 codes for its electronic mortgage accounts (Id. at P00150-51); Shaw’s adjustable rate note 24 dated October 8, 2013 (Id. at P00152-60); the recorded first deed of trust (Id. at P00161-25 82); and the June 20, 2012 assignment of deed of trust to CMI (Id. at P00183-87). The 26 letter further advised Shaw that CMI had determined that Shaw had been eligible for a 1 modification of his residential loan, but that his application was closed for lack of 2 documentation because he did not sign and return the July 2011 Modification Agreement.

3 Id. at P00139.

4 93. On or about March 19, 2013, Maria Mejia (“Mejia”), an employee in CMI’s Homeowner 5 Assistance Department, was assigned as the short sale advisor to review the Knapp Offer.
6 Def. Trial Ex. 26.

7 94. On March 26, 2013, Mejia contacted Shaw’s real estate agent and advised Shaw, through 8 his real estate agent, that in order for CMI to review the Knapp Offer, Shaw had to submit 9 several documents including: (1) a hardship letter; (2) a signed purchase agreement (as the 10 original offer had expired in late February 2013); (3) Shaw’s tax returns for the tax years 11 2011 and 2012; (4) all payoffs for the junior liens on the property within the last sixty 12 days, if any; or, (5) if the junior liens still needed to be paid off, then approval letters of 13 the short sale by each junior lien holder and releases of their junior liens; (6) the 2011 real 14 estate tax bill for the McFaul Court property; and (7) a hazard insurance policy on the 15 property. Def. Trial Ex. 525-A.

16 95. In mid-March 2013, Shaw and the Knapps signed an agreement to extend the Knapp Offer 17 for an additional thirty (30) days.

18 96. On April 3, 2013, an appraisal of the McFaul Court property was conducted at the request 19 of CMI as part of the evaluation of the Knapp Offer. Pl. Trial Ex. 49, P00283. At that 20 time, the McFaul Court property was appraised at a value of $1,082,000.00. Id.

21 97. In mid-April 2013, after no response to the Knapp Offer by CMI, Shaw and the Knapps 22 executed a second thirty (30) days extension on the Knapp Offer.

23 98. On May 6, 2013, dismissed defendant NTS recorded a Notice of Trustee’s Sale on the 24 McFaul Court property in the official records of Douglas County, Nevada (Doc. No.
25 0823028) setting the trustee’s sale for June 5, 2013. Def. Trial Ex. 507-B, CMI000049-50.

1 99. On May 16, 2013, Shaw received an e-mail from Mejia informing him that CMI had not 2 received all required documentation for CMI to review and consider the Knapp Offer.

3 Shaw resubmitted most of the documentation but did not provide, at any point during the 4 relevant time period, payoff information on the junior liens or a release of liens from the 5 junior lien holders.

6 100. On May 23, 2013, CMI denied the short sale of the McFaul Court property under the 7 Knapp Offer for lack of documentation related to the junior lien holders. However, by that 8 point, the Knapp Offer had already expired under the terms of the second extension.

9 101. On June 5, 2013, dismissed defendant NTS sent Shaw a letter advising him that the 10 trustee's sale set for June 5, 2013, was postponed until August 7, 2013. Pl. Trial Ex. 45
11 P00204.

12 102. In July 2013, Shaw and the Knapps revived the Knapp Offer to purchase the McFaul 13 Court property as a short sale for the purchase price of $857,000.00. Shaw submitted the 14 revived Knapp Offer to CMI. Along with the revived Knapp Offer, Shaw submitted all 15 documents originally requested by CMI for consideration of the short sale except for 16 releases from the junior lien holders.

17 103. On July 26, 2013, Shaw filed his initial complaint against CMI initiating the present 18 action. ECF No. 1, Exhibit 1, p.8-19.

19 104. In mid-August 2013, after no response to the revived Knapp Offer by CMI, Shaw and the 20 Knapps executed a thirty (30) day extension on the offer.

21 105. In mid-September 2013, again after no response to the revived Knapp Offer by CMI, 22 Shaw and the Knapps executed a second thirty (30) day extension on the offer.

23 106. In October 2013, Shaw applied for and was denied credit as a cosigner for his son on a 24 thirty-six (36) month lease of a Kia automobile.

25 107. In mid-October 2013, after still no response to the revived Knapp Offer by CMI, Shaw 26 and the Knapps executed a third and final thirty (30) day extension on the offer.

- 1 108. In mid-November 2013, the revived Knapp Offer expired under the terms of the last 2 extension. At that point, Shaw ended his listing agreement with non-party Pinnacle Realty 3 and the McFaul Court property was no longer listed for sale.
- 4 109. On December 11, 2013, and in response to developments in the litigation, dismissed 5 defendant NTS recorded a rescission of the notice of default in the official records of 6 Douglas County, Nevada (Doc. No. 0835262). Def. Trial Ex. 508-B.
- 7 110. During the infancy of the litigation, defendant CMI was represented by Attorney Colt 8 Dodrill (“Attorney Dodrill”). While the litigation was proceeding, Shaw contacted and 9 met with Attorney Dodrill several times. In December 2013, after a court hearing, 10 Attorney Dodrill and Shaw had a discussion about the possible short sale of the McFaul 11 Court property. As part of that conversation, Attorney Dodrill advised Shaw that if he was 12 to re-list the property for sale and accept any short sale offers, those offers should be 13 submitted directly to Attorney Dodrill as counsel of record for CMI, rather than to CMI’s 14 Homeowner’s Assistance department.
- 15 111. After the discussion with Attorney Dodrill, Shaw listed the McFaul Court property as a 16 short sale with non-party Chase International Realty, at a listing price of $1,082,000.00, 17 the appraised value of the property in April 2013.
- 18 112. On April 3, 2014, Shaw filed an amended complaint in this litigation. ECF No. 52.
- 19 113. On April 8, 2014, Shaw received a short sale offer on the McFaul Court property from 20 non-parties Darin and Lisette Smith (“the Smiths”) to purchase the property for 21 $785,000.00. Pl. Trial Ex. 48A.
- 22 114. On April 11, 2014, Shaw submitted a counter-offer to the Smiths for the same purchase 23 price which they accepted (“the first Smith Offer”). Pl. Trial Ex. 48A. The terms of the 24 accepted counter-offer included that: (1) CMI had until April 30, 2014, to approve the 25 short sale; (2) Katherine Barkley and Janice Shaw, the second and third junior lien 26 holders, would be paid in full on their junior liens from the sale proceeds of the McFaul

1 Court property; (3) Shaw would receive $75,000.00 from the sale proceeds of the 2 property; and (4) CMI would receive the remaining sale proceeds as full and final 3 satisfaction of Shaw's residential loan and the first deed of trust. Id.

4 115. On April 14, 2014, Shaw forwarded the first Smith Offer to Attorney Dodrill and 5 demanded a response on the offer by April 28, 2014. Pl. Trial Ex. 48A.

6 116. On April 30, 2014, the first Smith Offer lapsed pursuant to its terms without any action by 7 CMI on the short sale offer.

8 117. On June 2, 2014, CMI denied the first Smith Offer. However, by that point, the offer had 9 already expired under its terms more than a month earlier.

10 118. On July 11, 2014, Shaw received another short sale offer from the Smiths to purchase the 11 McFaul Court property for $825,000.00 ("the second Smith Offer"). Pl. Trial Ex. 48B.
12 The terms of the second Smith Offer included: (1) approval of the short sale by CMI 13 within 5 business days of acceptance by Shaw; (2) Katherine Barkley and Janice Shaw, 14 the second and third junior lien holders, would be paid in full on their junior liens from 15 the sale proceeds; (3) Shaw would receive $75,000.00 from the sale proceeds; and (4)
16 CMI would receive the remaining proceeds as full and final satisfaction of Shaw's 17 residential loan and the first deed of trust. Id. Shaw accepted and forwarded the second 18 Smith Offer to Attorney Andrew Bao ("Attorney Bao"), CMI's new counsel of record in 19 the litigation. Pl. Trial Ex. 48B. Attorney Bao advised Shaw that the second Smith Offer 20 had been submitted to CMI and that if any further information was required to consider 21 the offer he would contact Shaw. Id.

22 119. On July 19, 2014, the second Smith Offer lapsed without any action by CMI.

23 120. During Shaw's attempts to sell the property in 2013 and 2014, junior lien holder 24 Katherine Barkley did not have any conversations with Shaw regarding the various short 25 sale offers on the McFaul Court property, had not agreed to any short sale offers on the 26 property, and had not agreed to release her junior lien.

121. Similarly, junior lien holder Janice Shaw did not have any conversations with Shaw regarding the various short sale offers on the McFaul Court property, had not agreed to any short sale offer on the property, and had not agreed to release her junior lien.¹¹

122. On August 25, 2014, Shaw filed his second amended complaint in this action. ECF No. 109. The second amended complaint is the operative complaint in this litigation.

123. By the time trial began in May 2016, Shaw's mortgage account with CMI showed a total amount due of $1,162,304.95. Pl. Trial Ex. 57. This amount was calculated as the combination of the remaining principal balance of $891,467.07; $221,350.69 in accrued interest; $43,110.45 in advanced escrow charges;¹² $186.90 in fees; and $7963.83 in past-due fees and late charges. Id.

124. Throughout the history of this action, Shaw sought contact information from CMI for the current owner of his residential loan. However, prior to trial in June of 2016, CMI never provided contact information for, or identified the actual current owner of Shaw's residential loan.

125. Throughout the history of this action Shaw suffered a loss of personal and business reputation as a direct consequence of CMI's conduct, collection activities, and eventual initiation of foreclosure proceedings on the McFaul Court property.

18 II. Conclusions of Law

19 In his second amended complaint, Shaw has alleged five causes of action against CMI that 20 are currently before the court: declaratory relief, breach of contract, breach of the implied covenants 21 of good faith and fair dealing, interference with prospective economic advantage, and violation of

23 ¹¹ Due to their status as junior lien holders on the McFaul Court property and beneficiaries under 24 Shaw's obligations in their favor, the court will order that copies of this order be served upon them by Shaw's counsel.

25 ¹² Since January 2012, CMI has advanced and paid all taxes, Homeowner's Insurance premiums, and 26 other escrow expenses on the McFaul Court property in order to protect its security interest under the first deed of trust. Def. Trial Ex. 513-B.

1 the Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act. ECF No. 109. Shaw has the burden of proof on all his 2 claims and must prove each claim by a preponderance of the evidence. See, e.g., Cal. State Bd. of 3 Equilization v. Renovisor's Inc., 282 F.3d 1233 (9th Cir. 2002) (stating the basic premise that civil 4 claims must be proven by a preponderance of the evidence). Along with contract and tort damages, 5 Shaw also seeks punitive damages for CMI's conduct in this action. See ECF No. 109. In order to 6 be eligible for an award of punitive damages, Shaw must prove by clear and convincing evidence 7 that CMI engaged in oppression, fraud, or malice. See NRS §42.005(1). The court addresses each 8 of Shaw's remaining causes of action below.

9 A. Declaratory Relief

10 Pursuant to Section 2201 of the Declaratory Judgment Act, "any court of the United States 11 . . . may declare the rights and other legal relations of any interested party seeking such 12 declaration." 28 U.S.C. §2201. Further "[a]ny such declaration shall have the force and effect of a 13 final judgment or decree and shall be reviewable as such." Id. In his claim for declaratory relief, 14 Shaw seeks a declaration from the court that the May 2011 Modification Agreement was a fully 15 executed, valid, and binding loan modification agreement between the parties and that such 16 agreement was, pursuant to its terms, effective May 1, 2011. See ECF No. 109. Shaw also seeks an 17 order from the court declaring the parties' obligations and financial relationship under that 18 agreement. Id.

 22 mutual intent to contract." Ridenour v. Bank of Am., N.A., 23 F. Supp. 3d 1201, 1208 (D. Idaho

6 Here, the undisputed evidence presented at trial establishes that defendant CMI offered to 7 modify Shaw’s residential home loan in May 2011. CMI sent Shaw a letter written by CMI
8 employee Kim Vukovich along with a copy of the May 2011 Modification Agreement. CMI’s letter 9 specifically advised Shaw that he was eligible for a loan modification as outlined by the terms of 10 the enclosed agreement. The letter further advised Shaw that if he accepted the terms of that 11 agreement, he should execute and submit the agreement to CMI. Shaw properly executed, by 12 notarized signature, the May 2011 Modification Agreement and submitted the agreement to CMI
13 on May 18, 2011, pursuant to CMI’s instructions. CMI then accepted the executed May 2011
14 Modification Agreement by booking the terms of the modification into Shaw’s electronic mortgage 15 account on May 23, 2011. After that date, Shaw’s mortgage account showed that his residential 16 loan had been modified pursuant to the terms of the May 2011 Modification Agreement.

17 Additionally, on June 30, 2011, after having already booked the May 2011 Modification 18 Agreement into Shaw’s mortgage account and having accepted Shaw’s first timely made modified 19 payment under the agreement, CMI Vice-President Larry Bauman separately executed, by notarized 20 signature, the May 2011 Modification Agreement on behalf of CMI. CMI then sent a copy of the 21 completed May 2011 Modification Agreement, executed by both parties, to Shaw on August 9, 22 2011. Moreover, CMI, through its Assistant General Counsel, Dana Ross, and Homeowner Support
23 Specialist Chris Gabbert, recognized both the validity and the legality of the May 2011 24 Modification Agreement in a separate letter to Shaw sent on August 23, 2011. Finally, it is 25 undisputed that CMI accepted Shaw’s timely made modified monthly payments of $3079.30 from 26 June through December 2011.

1 The court finds that this record of activity is sufficient to establish an offer of a modification
2 by CMI and acceptance of that offer by Shaw. Such conduct establishes the formation of a contract 3 as a matter of law. See Erection Co., 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 121581, at *19. Further, this record of 4 activity unequivocally established “a manifestation of mutual intent” between the parties to modify 5 Shaw’s residential home loan. Ridenour, 23 F. Supp. 3d at 1208. Therefore, the court finds that the 6 undisputed evidence in this action establishes that the parties executed a valid and binding loan 7 modification agreement known as the May 2011 Modification Agreement that defines the financial 8 relationship, duties, and obligations between Shaw and CMI, the terms of which are outlined in the 9 agreement. See Pl. Trial Ex. 6, P00016-20. The court makes this finding concerning the formation 10 and validity of the May 2011 Modification Agreement nunc pro tunc.

11 As the court has found that the May 2011 Modification Agreement is a valid contract 12 between the parties, the court finds that due to the long history of this action it is necessary to 13 define the obligations and financial relationship of the parties under the May 2011 Modification 14 Agreement and going forward from this order. In that regard, the court makes these additional 15 findings. First, the modification of Shaw’s residential loan pursuant to the May 2011 Modification 16 Agreement became effective May 1, 2011. See Pl. Trial Ex. 6, P00017, Section 4. Second, pursuant 17 to the contract, Shaw’s modified monthly payments for the first two years of the agreement were 18 set at $3,079.30, with the first payment having been due on June 1, 2011. Id. at P00018, Section 19 4(C). It is undisputed that Shaw timely made modified monthly payments under the May 2011
20 Modification Agreement from June through December 2011, for a total of seven (7) modified 21 payments. As addressed in depth below when analyzing Shaw’s breach of contract claim, the court 22 finds that Shaw’s breach of the May 2011 Modification Agreement - by withholding his modified 23 monthly mortgage payments beginning in January 2012 - was reasonable and excused because of 24 CMI’s anticipatory repudiation of the May 2011 Modification Agreement in December 2011. See 25 Infra Section II(B)(ii). Accordingly, the court considers the time period from January 2012, through 26 the date of this order tolled and excluded under the agreement. The court finds that this tolling of

1 the modification agreement is equitable based on CMI's continued refusal to recognize the 2 existence of the May 2011 Modification Agreement until the filing of the pretrial order in late 3 2015, four-and-a-half years after the May 2011 Modification Agreement was executed by both 4 parties. Therefore, going forward from this order, Shaw's modified monthly payment under the 5 May 2011 Modification Agreement remains $3,079.30 for the next seventeen (17) months, after 6 which the monthly payment will increase pursuant to the staggered payment plan outlined in the 7 agreement with the date the staggered payments begin commencing from the date of this order and 8 excluding the tolled period. See Pl. Trial Ex. 6, P00018, Section 4(C). Similarly, the maturity date 9 of Shaw's modified loan is extended from November 1, 2033, until approximately August 1, 2038, 10 to account for the time tolled in this action.

11 Third, as specified in the May 2011 Modification Agreement, Shaw's principal balance on 12 the loan was set at $910,110.34, $85,777.89 of which was deferred from interest charges and is due 13 as a balloon payment at the end of Shaw's loan. See Pl. Trial Ex. 6, P00017-18, Section 4(B) & 14 4(C). Since that time, Shaw made seven modified payments of $3,079.30 under the agreement and 15 reduced the principal balance on his residential loan. According to Shaw's April 2016 mortgage 16 statement admitted at trial, his current remaining principal balance under his loan is $891,467.07.
17 Pl. Trial Ex. 57. Thus, going forward, the court finds that the remaining principal balance on 18 Shaw's loan is $891,467.07, and that Shaw's mortgage account with CMI should reflect this 19 amount.

20 Fourth, the court recognizes that beginning in January 2012, CMI advanced $43,100.45 in 21 escrow funds to Shaw's mortgage account in order to protect its security interest in the McFaul 22 Court property during the parties' dispute and this litigation. See Pl. Trial Ex. 57; Def. Trial Ex.
23 513-B. These advanced escrow funds included quarterly property tax payments on the McFaul 24 Court property, monthly Homeowner's Insurance premiums, and other escrow expenses for which 25 Shaw was responsible under the terms of his original residential loan, first deed of trust, and the 26 May 2011 Modification Agreement. CMI made all escrow payments on Shaw's account since 1 January 2012, even though Shaw's escrow account had insufficient funds to make these payments.

2 Though it was in CMI's interest to advance these funds in order to protect its security interest in the 3 McFaul Court property, Shaw directly benefited from CMI's conduct as no property tax liens were 4 recorded on the McFaul Court property during the parties' dispute and his Homeowner's Insurance
5 policy did not lapse. Accordingly, the court finds that in the interest of equity between the parties, 6 Shaw is liable for, and CMI is entitled to recover from Shaw, the $43,100.45 in advanced escrow 7 charges. Therefore, going forward from this order, Shaw's mortgage account should reflect that he 8 continues to owe $43,100.45 to CMI in advanced escrow charges.

9 Finally, the court finds that any other fees charged by CMI against Shaw's mortgage 10 account since January 2012, are invalid and improper. As the court has found the time between 11 January 2012 and this order is tolled and excluded from the May 2011 Modification Agreement, all 12 interest charges, late payment fees, and any other fees or past due amounts charged against Shaw 13 under either his original residential loan or the May 2011 Modification Agreement are excluded.
14 The court's finding specifically extends to and includes the $221,350.89 in accrued interest, 15 $189.90 in fees, and $7,963.83 in past-due fees and late charges reflected on Shaw's April 2016 16 mortgage statement, as well as any and all other expenses and fees that have accumulated since 17 January 2012, except for the aforementioned advanced escrow charges. See Pl. Trial Ex. 57.
18 Accordingly, the court shall issue judgment on Shaw's claim for declaratory relief as outlined 19 above.

20 B. Breach of Contract

21 To prevail on a breach of contract claim, a plaintiff must prove: (1) the existence of a valid 22 contract; (2) a breach of that contract by the defendant; and (3) damages resulting from defendant's 23 breach. Saini v. Int'l Game Tech., 434 F. Supp. 2d 913, 919-20 (D. Nev. 2006); Brown v. Kinross 24 Gold U.S.A., Inc., 531 F. Supp. 2d 1234, 1240 (D. Nev. 2008). A breach of contract can occur in 25 one of two ways. See Nev. Power Co. v. Calpine Corp., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36135, at *22
26 (D. Nev. 2006). The first is an actual breach of the specific terms and obligations of the contract.

2 contract. Nev. Power Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36135, at *23.

3 In this action, Shaw has alleged both an actual breach of contract claim and an anticipatory
4 breach of contract claim against CMI. See ECF No. 109; ECF No. 168. As each type of breach 5 permits different relief and requires proof of separate and distinct elements, the court shall evaluate 6 CMI's conduct for each type of breach separately.

7 i. Actual Breach

8 As addressed above, the court has found that the May 2011 Modification Agreement 9 constitutes a valid and binding contract. Supra Section II(A). Thus, the remaining issues for the 10 court to determine are (1) whether CMI breached the terms of the May 2011 Modification 11 Agreement, and (2) if there was a breach of that agreement, the damages Shaw incurred as a result 12 of that breach, if any. See Saini, 434 F. Supp. 2d at 920.

13 Under the terms of the May 2011 Modification Agreement, CMI had a duty to correctly 14 book and apply all of Shaw's timely made modified payments throughout the life of the modified 15 loan. Further, CMI had a duty to keep correct records of Shaw's mortgage account so that his 16 account was not improperly placed in default. However, in direct contravention of its obligations 17 and duties under the May 2011 Modification Agreement, CMI unbooked the modified loan terms 18 from Shaw's electronic mortgage account, unbooked Shaw's timely made mortgage payments for 19 the months of June and July 2011; placed Shaw's account into default at a time that he was current 20 on all his mortgage obligations under the express terms of the May 2011 Modification Agreement; 21 and refused to book Shaw's timely made mortgage payment for the month of August 2011. Further, 22 CMI sent Shaw collection notices demanding payment on over $30,000.00 in past due amounts in 23 both July and August 2011, even though pursuant to the terms of the May 2011 Modification 24 Agreement, all amounts that were previously past due (including the unpaid monthly payments 25 from October 2010, through February 2011, as well as the difference between Shaw's prior 26 monthly payments and the modified payments under the trial modification period) were specifically

1 included in the new principal balance of $910,110.34, and thus, there was no past due balance on 2 Shaw's mortgage account at the time.

3 The court finds that CMI's undisputed conduct was a direct breach of the May 2011 4 Modification Agreement. Further, the court finds that CMI's unilateral actions were made without 5 justification. As recognized by CMI, there was nothing legally deficient with the May 2011
6 Modification Agreement. Pl. Trial Ex. 21, P00060. Thus, CMI was not justified in unbooking both 7 the modification's terms and Shaw's monthly payments from his electronic mortgage account 8 simply because the May 2011 Modification Agreement lacked a payment date for the balloon 9 payment.

10 As the court has found that CMI breached the May 2011 Modification Agreement, the court 11 now turns to the issue of damages. Damages for a breach of contract claim are limited to those 12 specifically outlined in the contract, if any, and those expectation damages sufficient to put the non-13 breaching party in the position it would have been in had the breach not occurred. See, e.g., Keife v.
14 Metro. Life Ins. Co., 931 F. Supp. 2d 1100, 1108-09 (D. Nev. 2013); Midwest Precision Services,
15 Inc. v. PTM Indus. Corp., 887 F.2d 1128, 1136-37 (1st Cir. 1989). Here, the May 2011
16 Modification Agreement does not set forth any damages for a breach of that agreement by CMI. See 17 Pl. Trial Ex. 6, P00016-20. As such, Shaw's damages claim is limited to being placed in the same 18 position under the May 2011 Modification Agreement as if the agreement had not been breached by 19 CMI, which is a modification of his residential loan under the terms of that agreement. Shaw has 20 already achieved this position as addressed above in the court's analysis of Shaw's declaratory 21 relief claim. See Supra Section II(A). Further, it is undisputed that after CMI breached the May 22 2011 Modification Agreement it resolved and cured its breach of that agreement on August 15, 23 2011, when it rebooked the modification terms and Shaw's payments into his electronic mortgage 24 account. See Def. Trial Ex. 510-B, CMI000064. At the same time, CMI removed Shaw's account 25 from default and corrected the delinquent payment reports it had made to the various credit 26 reporting agencies during its breach. Finally, CMI waived all late fees and other charges that it had

1 charged to Shaw's account during its breach. Thus, Shaw was already placed in the same position
 2 under the May 2011 Modification Agreement in late August 2011, as if CMI's breach had not 3 occurred. And, Shaw has failed to prove any other consequential damages resulting from CMI's 4 one-month breach of the May 2011 Modification Agreement. Accordingly, the court finds that 5 Shaw is not entitled to contract damages for CMI's breach.

6 ii. Anticipatory Breach

7 An anticipatory breach is a breach of a contract that occurs when one party to the contract, 8 without justification and prior to a breach by the other party, makes a statement or engages in 9 conduct indicating that it will not or cannot substantially perform its duties under the contract. Nev.
 10 Power Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36135, at *28. An anticipatory breach, or repudiation, of a 11 contract may be express or implied. Id. An express repudiation occurs when one party demonstrates 12 "a definite unequivocal and absolute intent not to perform a substantial portion of the contract."
 13 Kahle v. Kostiner, 455 P.2d 42, 44 (Nev. 1969); see also Stratosphere Litigation, LLC v. Grand 14 Casinos, 298 F.3d 1137, 1147 (9th Cir. 2002) (holding that an "[a]nticipatory repudiation occurs 15 when a party through conduct or language makes a clear, positive and unequivocal declaration of an 16 intent not to perform."). An implied repudiation occurs when one party acts in such a manner as to 17 make its future performance under the contract impossible. Covington Bros. v. Valley Plastering, 18 Inc., 566 P.2d 814, 817 (Nev. 1977). If one party anticipatorily breaches the contract, a repudiation 19 of the contract has occurred and the non-breaching party is excused from performing its obligations
 20 under the contract. Kahle, 455 P.2d at 44; see also Cleverley v. Ballantyne, 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 21 177416, at *13 (D. Nev. 2013) (stating that an anticipatory repudiation of a contract excuses the 22 necessity for the non-breaching party to tender performance).

23 The court has reviewed the evidence presented at trial and finds that CMI expressly 24 repudiated the May 2011 Modification Agreement. The evidence in this action establishes that CMI
 25 made repeated, unambiguous, and unequivocal statements to Shaw that the May 2011 Modification 26 Agreement was not a binding modification agreement between the parties, that Shaw did not have

1 any modification agreement with CMI, and that CMI would not recognize any modification 2 agreement until Shaw executed the July 2011 Modification Agreement. CMI began making these 3 statements to Shaw in July 2011, when Chris Gabbert, Shaw's Homeowner Support Specialist, told 4 Shaw that CMI would only grant him a modification of his loan if he signed the July 2011
5 Modification Agreement. And CMI continued making similar statements about the need for Shaw
6 to execute the July 2011 Modification Agreement even after CMI had rebooked the May 2011
7 Modification Agreement in August 2011. For example, Shaw's next Homeowner Support 8 Specialist, Jennifer Butler, unequivocally advised Shaw in December 2011, and repeatedly through 9 early 2012, that he would not have any modification of his residential loan unless he signed the July 10 2011 Modification Agreement and that this decision was confirmed by CMI's Loss Mitigation and 11 underwriting departments. Although Gabbert's statement concerning the validity of the May 2011
12 Modification Agreement was prior to CMI curing its breach in August 2011, Butler's statements 13 regarding the validity of the May 2011 Modification Agreement occurred in December 2011, over 14 four months after CMI rebooked that agreement. And still no explanation was ever provided to 15 Shaw for CMI's change in position between August 23, 2011, and early December 2011.

16 Based on this conduct, especially all conduct that occurred after CMI's "resolution" of 17 Shaw's mortgage account in August 2011, the court finds that CMI expressly repudiated the May 18 2011 Modification Agreement. CMI's conduct constituted "a definite unequivocal and absolute 19 intent not to perform" under the contract. Kahle, 455 P.2d at 44. In fact, this court cannot imagine a 20 more unequivocal and absolute intent to not perform under the May 2011 Modification Agreement 21 than stating that the agreement executed by the parties simply did not exist, and would not be 22 honored. Moreover, as addressed above in Shaw's actual breach of contract claim, the court finds 23 that CMI was not justified in its conduct simply because the May 2011 Modification Agreement 24 did not contain a specific due date for the balloon payment. See Supra Section II(B)(i). Therefore, 25 the court finds that because CMI repudiated the May 2011 Modification Agreement, Shaw was 26 excused from his performance under that agreement beginning in January 2012. Further, the court

1 finds that Shaw was reasonable in withholding his payments after being told by Butler in December
2 2011, that the May 2011 Modification Agreement was not in force and that there would be no
3 modification unless and until he executed the July 2011 Modification Agreement based on CMI's 4 prior conduct in both breaching and repudiating the contract in July 2011, and its history of 5 inconsistent and contradictory statements. Thus, because Shaw's non-performance under the May 6 2011 Modification Agreement was excused, all interest, late fees, and past due charges accrued on 7 Shaw's loan since January 2012, are not recoverable by CMI and the court finds that these charges
8 shall be excluded from Shaw's mortgage account.¹³

9 C. Breach of the Implied Covenants of Good Faith and Fair Dealing

10 Under Nevada law, "[e]very contract imposes upon each party a duty of good faith and fair 11 dealing in its performance and execution." A.C. Shaw Constr. v. Washoe Cty., 784 P.2d 9, 9 (Nev.
12 1989) (quoting Restatement (Second) of Contracts §205); see also Nelson v. Heer, 163 P.3d 420, 13 427 (Nev. 2007) ("It is well established that all contracts impose upon the parties an implied 14 covenant of good faith and fair dealing, which prohibits arbitrary or unfair actions by one party that 15 work to the disadvantage of the other."). "The implied covenants of good faith and fair dealing 16 impose a burden that requires each party to a contract to 'refrain from doing anything to injure the 17 right of the other to receive the benefits of the agreement.'" Integrated Storage Consulting Servs., 18 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 107705, at *23 (quoting San Jose Prod. Credit Ass'n v. Old Republic Life 19 Ins. Co., 723 F.2d 700, 703 (9th Cir. 1984).

20 To establish a claim for breach of the implied covenants of good faith and fair dealing, a 21 plaintiff must prove: (1) the existence of a contract between the parties; (2) that defendant breached 22 its duty of good faith and fair dealing by acting in a manner unfaithful to the purpose of the 23 contract; and (3) the plaintiff's justified expectations under the contract were denied. See Perry v.

25 ¹³ The court has previously addressed the impact of CMI's anticipatory breach and how it affects the 26 parties going forward from the court's order in the court's analysis of Shaw's declaratory relief claim. See Supra Section II(A).

1 Jordan, 900 P.2d 335, 338 (Nev. 1995) (citing Hilton Hotels Corp. v. Butch Lewis Prod. Inc., 808
 2 P.2d 919, 922-23 (Nev. 1991). Generally, the remedy for a breach of the implied covenants of good
 3 faith and fair dealing is limited to contractual remedies. Mundy v. Household Fin. Corp., 885 F.2d
 4 542, 544 (9th Cir. 1989); see also Nev. Power Co., 2006 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 36135, at *26 (“As a 5 contract concept, breach of duty leads to the imposition of contract damages determined by the 6 nature of the breach and contract principles.”). However, in limited circumstances, a breach of the 7 implied covenants can give rise to tort liability. See, e.g., State v. Sutton, 103 P.3d 8, 19 (Nev.
 8 2004) (holding that in special circumstances, a breach of the implied covenants of good faith and 9 fair dealing can give rise to tort liability).

10 In his second amended complaint, Shaw has alleged a breach of the implied covenants of 11 good faith and fair dealing arising from CMI’s repeated refusal to accept the May 2011 12 Modification Agreement and continued demands for both payment on past due amounts and the 13 execution of the July 2011 Modification Agreement. ECF No. 109. As part of this claim, Shaw has 14 requested both contract and tort damages. Id. Because Shaw is requesting both contract and tort 15 damages, the court shall evaluate Shaw’s breach of the implied covenants claims separately for 16 both a contractual and tortious breach.

17 i. Contractual Breach of Implied Covenants

18 A contractual breach of the implied covenants of good faith and fair dealing occurs 19 “[w]here the terms of a contract are literally complied with but one party to the contract deliberately 20 countervenes the intention and spirit of the contract.” Hilton Hotels Corp., 808 P.2d at 923-24.
 21 “Establishing such a breach of the implied covenant depends upon the ‘nature and purposes of the 22 underlying contract and the legitimate expectations of the parties arising from the contract.’” 23 Integrated Storage Consulting Servs., 2013 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 107705, at *23 (quoting Mundy, 885 24 F.2d at 544) As such, a breach of the implied covenants of good faith and fair dealing is “limited to 25 assuring compliance with the express terms of the contract, and cannot be extended to create 26 obligations not contemplated by the contract.” McKnight v. Torres, 563 F.3d 890, 893 (9th Cir.

2 At trial, Shaw testified that under the terms of the May 2011 Modification Agreement he 3 expected to receive a modification of his loan as outlined by the express terms of that agreement 4 and that his mortgage account would no longer be in default as a result of the modification.
5 However, after the parties executed the May 2011 Modification Agreement, CMI engaged in a 6 pattern of conduct specifically designed to thwart the purpose of the contract and Shaw's 7 reasonable expectations¹⁴ of a modification of his residential home loan.

8 Initially, the court notes that some of CMI's conduct which Shaw contends establishes a 9 breach of the implied covenants cannot support his claim as a matter of law. It is well established 10 that a claim alleging breach of the implied covenants of good faith and fair dealing cannot be based 11 on the same conduct establishing a separately pled breach of contract claim. Daly v. United 12 Healthcare Ins. Co., 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 116048, at *4 (N.D. Cal. 2010); see also Guz v.
13 Betchel Nat. Inc., 8 P.3d 1089 (Cal. 2010) (holding that when both a breach of contract and breach 14 of implied covenants claim are based on the same conduct, the implied covenants claim is 15 superfluous). Thus, CMI's conduct that was a direct actual breach of the May 2011 Modification 16 Agreement in July 2011, cannot support Shaw's implied covenants claim. As such, the court 17 cannot, and shall not, consider CMI's conduct in unbooking the May 2011 Modification Agreement 18 and all payments made under that agreement from Shaw's electronic mortgage account in 19 determining whether CMI breached the implied covenants.

20 Nonetheless, the court finds that Shaw has proven by a preponderance of the evidence that 21 CMI breached the implied covenants of good faith and fair dealing. First, it is undisputed that 22 within two weeks after CMI executed the May 2011 Modification Agreement, CMI sent Shaw an 23 entirely new modification agreement, the July 2011 Modification Agreement. This new agreement 24 was identified by CMI employee Juan Mayorga as a "corrected" agreement that had to be signed by

25
26 ¹⁴ The court has reviewed the May 2011 Modification Agreement and finds that Shaw's expectations under that agreement were reasonable and justified.

1 Shaw before CMI would modify Shaw's residential loan even though it contained new material 2 terms. No explanation was ever provided to Shaw for why the new modification agreement had 3 been sent. Even Mayorga, the CMI employee who sent the July 2011 Modification Agreement, was 4 unable to inform Shaw as to why the new agreement had been drafted. Shaw was given similar 5 unresponsive answers from Chris Gabbert, who also directed Shaw to sign the new agreement if he 6 wanted a loan modification. The court finds that within the context of the confusing signals to 7 Shaw, CMI's conduct of executing a loan modification agreement and then insisting upon a new 8 agreement with materially different terms without explanation to Shaw "deliberately contravenes 9 the intention and spirit" of the properly executed and valid May 2011 Modification Agreement.
10 Hilton Hotels Corp., 808 P.2d at 923-24. CMI's conduct was completely unfaithful to the purpose 11 of the May 2011 Modification Agreement which was to provide Shaw with a modification of his 12 residential home loan.¹⁵

13 Further, CMI engaged in a similar pattern of conduct after resolving Shaw's account in 14 August 2011. For example, Shaw timely made all modified monthly payments of $3,079.30 under 15 the May 2011 Modification Agreement through December 2011. Def. Trial Ex. 510-B, 16 CMI000063-64. However, during that same time, Shaw received written collection notices from 17 CMI demanding payment on non-existent past due amounts. Further, after his account was 18 transferred to Jennifer Butler in December 2011, CMI reversed its position on the May 2011 19 Modification Agreement and once again claimed that Shaw did not have any modification with 20 CMI because he had not yet signed the July 2011 Modification Agreement. Moreover, even after 21 being informed that CMI had previously determined that there was nothing legally deficient in the 22 May 2011 Modification Agreement, CMI's Loss Mitigation and underwriting departments

24 ¹⁵ The court recognizes that this aforementioned conduct occurred prior to Shaw receiving his copy of 25 the fully executed May 2011 Modification Agreement and the involvement of CMI's Assistant General 26 Counsel, Dana Ross. Once Ross got involved with Shaw's mortgage issues, CMI resolved Shaw's account by determining that the May 2011 Modification Agreement was a valid agreement which constituted a modification of Shaw's residential home loan. However, CMI's conduct prior to this resolution in August 2011 is still relevant to Shaw's claim as it constitutes a breach of the implied covenants until that resolution.

1 confirmed that Shaw did not have a loan modification with CMI in December 2011, and would not 2 have a recognized loan modification with CMI unless and until he signed the July 2011
3 Modification Agreement. The court finds that this post August 2011 conduct likewise “deliberately 4 contravenes the intention and spirit” of the May 2011 Modification Agreement. Hilton Hotel Corp., 5 808 P.2d at 923-24. Based on all of CMI’s conduct in this action, the court finds that CMI breached 6 the implied covenants of good faith and fair dealing.

7 As the court has found that CMI breached the implied covenants of good faith and fair 8 dealing, the court now turns to the issue of damages. Damages under a contractual breach of the 9 implied covenants are limited to regular contract damages. Munly, 885 F.2d at 544. As addressed 10 above in the court’s analysis of Shaw’s actual breach of contract claim, Shaw is not entitled to 11 contract-based damages. See Supra Section II(B)(i). Shaw has already been placed in the position 12 that he would have been under the May 2011 Modification Agreement absent CMI’s breach of the 13 implied covenants. Id. Further, Shaw has not proven any other contract damages that could be 14 awarded under this claim. Therefore, the court finds that Shaw is not entitled to any damages for 15 CMI’s contractual breach of the implied covenants.

16 ii. Tortious Breach of Implied Covenants

17 Generally, a breach of the implied covenants is a contract-based claim. Hilton Hotels Corp., 18 808 P.2d at 923. However, a breach of the implied covenants can give rise to tort liability when 19 there is a special relationship between the contracting parties. Id. (stating that a tort action for an 20 implied covenants claim requires a special element of reliance or fiduciary duty); see also Sutton, 21 103 P.3d at 19 (Tort liability for breach of the implied covenants of good faith and fair dealing is 22 appropriate where “the party in the superior or entrusted position has engaged in grievous and 23 perfidious misconduct.”); Max Baer Prods., Ltd. v. Riverwood Partners, LLC, 2010 U.S. Dist.
24 LEXIS 100325, at *14 (D. Nev. 2010) (“Although every contract contains an implied covenant of 25 good faith and fair dealing, an action in tort for breach of the covenant arises only ‘in rare and 26 exceptional cases’ when there is a special relationship between the victim and tortfeasor.”). A

1 special relationship is “characterized by elements of public interest, adhesion, and fiduciary 2 responsibility.” Id. Under a tortious breach, “a successful plaintiff is entitled to compensation for 3 all of the natural and probable consequences of the wrong, including injury to the feelings from 4 humiliation, indignity and disgrace to the person.” Sutton, 103 P.3d at 19.

5 Here, the court finds that there is a special relationship between the parties sufficient to 6 support tort liability in this action. First, the parties are in drastically different and unequal 7 bargaining positions. Max Baer Prods., Ltd., 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 100325, at *9 (holding that 8 courts allow tort liability where one party holds “vastly superior bargaining power”). CMI, as the 9 servicer of Shaw’s residential loan, held all of the bargaining power as it controlled the decision of 10 whether to offer Shaw a loan modification, as well as the terms of that agreement. In contrast, Shaw 11 had limited bargaining power as a financially strapped borrower seeking a modification to a loan 12 agreement that he agreed to years earlier and for which CMI held a protected security interest.
13 Although it was in CMI’s interest to grant Shaw a modification so that Shaw would continue 14 making payments, CMI was under no obligation to offer Shaw the May 2011 Modification 15 Agreement or any modification agreement at all. Further, the loan modification agreement is an 16 adhesion contract as CMI completely dictated the terms of the modification with no input by Shaw 17 and offered that agreement to Shaw with his only option to agree to or refuse the agreement. The 18 parties’ relationship necessarily shares “a special element of reliance” sufficient for the court to 19 find a special relationship between the parties for tort liability. Id. at *15. In such relationships, 20 courts have routinely recognized that “there is a need to ‘protect the weak from the insults of the 21 stronger’ that is not adequately met by ordinary contract damages.” Id.

22 Further, the same conduct that supports a claim for contractual breach of the implied 23 covenants also supports a claim for tortious breach of the implied covenants. See Supra 24 Section II(C)(i). The court now turns to the issue of compensable damages under this claim. In his

1 complaint, Shaw seeks general tort damages pursuant to NRS §41.334.¹⁶ See ECF No. 109. NRS 2 §41.334 allows for a party to receive compensation for “loss of reputation, shame, mortification
3 and hurt feelings.” Further, under a tortious breach of the implied covenants claim, “a successful 4 plaintiff is entitled to compensation for all of the natural and probable consequences of the wrong, 5 including injury to the feelings from humiliation, indignity and disgrace to the person.” Sutton, 103 6 P.3d at 19.

7 The court has reviewed all the testimony and documents admitted at trial and finds that 8 Shaw has proven by a preponderance of the evidence that he suffered a loss of reputation, shame, 9 mortification, indignity and disgrace as a direct result of CMI’s tortious breach of the implied 10 covenants. Shaw testified that he suffered both a loss in personal and business reputation as a 11 proximate result of CMI’s improper collection efforts after executing the May 2011 Modification 12 Agreement. For example, Shaw testified that door hanger collection notices were placed on the 13 door of the McFaul Court property in plain sight and were visible to his neighbors and guests to the 14 property. Further, Shaw testified that he received various e-mails, letters, and comments from 15 former clients and former spouses of former clients. In those various communications, Shaw was 16 chastised and his professional skills as an attorney were questioned as he, himself, was suffering
17 financial difficulties and facing potential foreclosure upon his personal residence. Further, Shaw’s 18 prior business partner in his legal practice used Shaw’s lack of creditworthiness, as a result of 19 CMI’s pending foreclosure, in a separate legal dispute regarding the partnership’s assets (which 20 included another property) which eventually led to Shaw leaving the business and starting a new 21 practice in Reno, Nevada. Additionally, Shaw testified that he suffered from increasing feelings of 22 frustration, worthlessness, shame and sleeplessness in not being able to resolve or even confront his 23 financial difficulties because of the dispute with CMI. The court finds that Shaw has proven by a 24

25 ¹⁶ At trial, Shaw specifically stated that he was not seeking any damages for lost income, lost rent on 26 the McFaul Court property, or emotional distress within the context of a emotional distress claim. Thus, Shaw’s damages are limited to those under NRS §41.334.

1 preponderance of the evidence that he suffered a loss of reputation, shame, indignity and disgrace, 2 and other general damages as a proximate cause of CMI's conduct.

3 As the court has determined that Shaw has proven that he suffered general damages as a 4 result of CMI's conduct, the next significant issue for the court is to quantify Shaw's general
5 damages. A second issue is to determine the time frame for Shaw's damages arising from CMI's 6 tortious conduct. At trial, Shaw presented no evidence related to any monetary figure for his 7 general damages. In fact, the only number offered for Shaw's general damages was presented by 8 Shaw's counsel in closing. In Shaw's closing, Shaw's counsel asked the court to award Shaw 9 damages in the amount of $2,700 per day from the date of the execution of the May 2011 10 Modification Agreement by both parties through the date of trial for compensation in an amount of 11 approximately $5,000,000.00. However, there is no testimony or evidence to support that number 12 and the $2,700 per day figure has no relation to anything specific in this action.

13 The court has reviewed the documents and evidence admitted at trial and finds that an 14 appropriate award of compensatory damages to Shaw is $500 per day during the critical time 15 periods from May 23, 2011, through December 31, 2011, subject to tolling from August 23, 2011, 16 to December 7, 2011, during which the May 2011 Modification Agreement was being recognized 17 by CMI; $250 per day during the period commencing in January 2012 (when Shaw discontinued 18 further house payments) through August 2012 (when Shaw vacated the home); and a reduced 19 amount of $100 per day from August 2012 through the close of trial on May 5, 2016.

20 The court reaches the $500 per day figure based upon the reasonable amount of time spent 21 by Shaw in the many contacts, conversations, and other uneventful communications he had with 22 CMI concerning the properly executed and "not legally deficient" May 2011 Modification 23 Agreement. These uneventful contacts resulted in great stress and frustration to Shaw as well as 24 adverse effects upon Shaw's standing in the community, business reputation and credit worthiness.
25 In support of the damages amount, the court takes judicial notice that the hourly billing rate for an 26 experienced attorney of similar skills as Shaw in this district would have been a minimum of $300

1 per hour and there is no question that Shaw spent at least one to two hours a day, and on some days 2 much longer, either directly responding to or communicating with CMI and its representatives, or 3 attempting to understand CMI's inconsistent and contradictory positions concerning his mortgage 4 account and loan modification. The court also takes into consideration that any homeowner whose 5 home represented his or her most significant asset and also greatest debt, in this case over 6 $900,000.00, would undergo such frustration, feelings of worthlessness and shame which should be 7 reasonably and fairly compensable at a daily rate of $500.00 per day during this critical time period.
8 Calculating Shaw's damages during this period at a rate of $500 per day, the court finds that Shaw 9 is entitled to compensation in the amount of $57,000.00 ($500 per day for 114 days).

10 With regard to the period commencing January 2012, when Shaw stopped making his 11 monthly payments, through August 2012, when he voluntarily vacated the McFaul Court property, 12 the court finds that Shaw's decision to terminate payments for lack of reasonable treatment by CMI 13 and to ultimately vacate the house eight months later and move to Reno, Nevada, is reflective in 14 part of the continuation of Shaw's frustration, bitterness and shame imposed upon him by CMI 15 prior to January 2012. Thus the court finds that Shaw is entitled to receive compensation for the 16 harm he suffered during this time period. However, the court finds that Shaw's damages during this 17 period should be adjusted to $250 per day. Calculating Shaw's damages for this period, the court 18 finds that Shaw is entitled to compensation in the amount of $60,750.00 ($250 per day for 243 19 days).

20 Finally, with regard to the period commencing in August 2012 through the close of trial on 21 May 5, 2016, the court finds that the tortious conduct inflicted upon Shaw prior to this time 22 continued to cause him to suffer similarly compensable harm at an average rate of $100 per day.
23 The reduction in this amount of compensation is reflective of the fact that Shaw was no longer 24 paying his monthly mortgage payment and was no longer living in the McFaul Court property, 25 although he continued to suffer from the compensable harm previously imposed upon him by CMI 26 as previously set forth. Calculating Shaw's damages for this period, the court finds that Shaw is 1 entitled to compensation in the amount of $122,100.00 ($100.00 per day for 1,221 days).

2 D. RESPA

3 The Real Estate Settlement Procedures Act, found at 12 U.S.C. §2601 et seq., places certain 4 duties and restrictions on mortgage lenders, services, and other entities that deal with residential 5 mortgages. Pertinent to this action is Section 2605 of RESPA which requires a loan servicer, like 6 CMI, to respond to inquires from a borrower. See 12 U.S.C. §2605(e). Pursuant to Section 2605(e), 7 if a loan servicer receives a “qualified written request from the borrower” for information relating 8 to the servicing of the borrower’s loan, “the servicer shall provide a written response” appropriately 9 responding to the borrower’s request and providing any requested documentation. 12 U.S.C.
 10 §2605(e)(1)(A) & (2)(C). Similarly, pursuant to Section 2605(k), a loan servicer shall provide “the 11 identity, address, and other relevant contact information about the owner or assignee of the loan”
 12 when requested by the borrower. 12 U.S.C. §2605(k)(1)(D). For purposes of triggering a servicer’s 13 duty under RESPA, a Qualified Written Request must (1) be a written communication, and 14 (2) include “the name and account of the borrower,” and “a statement of the reasons for the belief 15 of the borrower, to the extent applicable, that the account is in error or provides sufficient detail to 16 the servicer regarding other information sought by the borrower.” 12 U.S.C. §2605(e)(1)(B)(i)-(ii).

17 If a servicer receives a Qualified Written Request from a borrower, then the servicer has 18 sixty (60) days to conduct an investigation into the borrower’s account, make any appropriate 19 corrections to that account, and respond to the borrower’s request “with production of the requested 20 information or an explanation of why the information is unavailable.” Pettie v. Saxon Mortg.
 21 Servs., 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4149, at *7 (W.D. Wash. 2009); see also 12 U.S.C. §2605(e)(2).
 22 Further, the servicer shall provide the contact information for an employee who can provide 23 assistance to the borrower. 12 U.S.C. §2605(e)(2). During the servicer’s sixty day investigation and 24 response period, a servicer is precluded from providing “information regarding any overdue 25 payment, owed by such borrower and relating to such period or qualified written request, to any 26 consumer reporting agency.” 12 U.S.C. §2605(e)(3). If a servicer fails to comply with its duties

1 under RESPA, the servicer may be liable for (1) any actual damages the borrower suffered as a 2 result of the servicer's failure to comply with its duties, and/or (2) statutory damages not to exceed 3 $2,000.00. 12 U.S.C. §2605(f).

4 In his second amended complaint, Shaw has alleged that he sent several Qualified Written 5 Requests to CMI requesting contact information for the owner of his loan and copies of various 6 loan documents, but that CMI failed to respond to his requests in violation of RESPA.
7 ECF No. 109. The initial step for the court under Shaw's RESPA claim is to determine whether 8 Shaw submitted Qualified Written Requests to CMI. At trial, Shaw testified that he requested 9 information from CMI about his mortgage and the owner of his loan immediately after CMI
10 unbooked the May 2011 Modification Agreement and placed his account into default and continued 11 to request this information throughout this litigation. In particular, Shaw alleged that he made the 12 following Qualified Written Requests to CMI: (1) a July 31, 2011 e-mail request to Chris Gabbert; 13 (2) a December 5, 2011 e-mail request to Dana Ross; (3) a January 3, 2012 e-mail request to Ross;
14 (4) a January 20, 2012 formal letter to Ross; (5) a June 20, 2012 e-mail request to Robert Orcutt;
15 (6) a January 29, 2013 formal letter to CMI; and (7) multiple written requests to Gabbert, Jennifer 16 Butler, and Orcutt beginning in the fall of 2011 and continuing until Shaw initiated this litigation.
17 The court shall address each alleged Qualified Written Request below.

18 To constitute a Qualified Written Request under RESPA, a letter must include the name and 19 account of the borrower as well as a statement of reasons for believing the account is in error.
20 Pettie, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4149, at *5. Initially, the court notes that Shaw's generally identified 21 written requests to Gabbert, Butler, and Orcutt beginning in the fall of 2011 are not sufficient to 22 constitute Qualified Written Requests. First, Shaw failed to provide any evidence of the dates of 23 these various communications or what information was requested or included in these 24 communications sufficient for the court to determine whether these communications met the 25 requirements of RESPA. Therefore, the court finds that Shaw has not met his burden to prove these 26 communications were Qualified Written Requests under RESPA.

1 As to the remaining alleged Qualified Written Requests, the court finds that Shaw did 2 proffer copies of these communications at trial. These admitted exhibits contain sufficient 3 information for the court to determine whether these communications meet the requirements for 4 Qualified Written Requests under RESPA. First, the court has reviewed the July 31, 2011 e-mail
5 request to Gabbert and finds that it does not constitute a Qualified Written Request. Although the e-6 mail (and all of Shaw's communications) appropriately identified Shaw and his mortgage account, 7 the e-mail does not contain a statement for why Shaw believes that his mortgage account is in error.
8 See Pl. Trial Ex. 15. Rather, the e-mail only complains of CMI's failure to previously identify the 9 current owner of his residential loan. These statements are insufficient to trigger CMI's RESPA
10 duties because they do not mention or discuss his default or mortgage account. See Pettie, 2009 11 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4149, at *6 (finding that RESPA "clearly requires that a disputing party give 12 specific 'reasons' for claiming that an account it in error."); Banayan v. OneWest Bank F.S.B., 2012 13 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35301, at *15 (S.D. Cal. 2012) (finding that a qualified written request must seek 14 information "relating to the servicing of a loan."). Thus, because this e-mail did not provide any 15 statement of reasons for Shaw's dispute with CMI regarding his mortgage account, the July 31, 16 2011 e-mail does not constitute a Qualified Written Request. Pettie, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4149, 17 at *7. Similarly, the court finds that Shaw's June 20, 2012 e-mail to Orcutt likewise did not 18 constitute a Qualified Written Request. That e-mail only complains of Orcutt's failure to provide 19 information about CMI's reinstatement offer and references several telephonic conversations. See 20 Pl. Trial Ex. 36. But, like Shaw's July 31, 2011 e-mail, the June 20, 2012 e-mail does not provide 21 any statement of the reasons for Shaw's dispute with CMI or the ongoing problems with his 22 mortgage account. Thus, as with the July 31, 2011 e-mail to Gabbert, the court finds that Shaw's 23 June 20, 2012 e-mail to Orcutt does not constitute a Qualified Written Request.

24 As for Shaw's remaining alleged Qualified Written Requests - the December 5, 2011 e-25 mail; January 3, 2012 e-mail; January 20, 2012 letter to Dana Ross; and the January 29, 2013
26 formal letter to CMI - the court finds that these document did constitute Qualified Written Requests

1 sufficient to trigger CMI's investigation and response duties under RESPA. In his December 5, 2 2011 e-mail to Ross, Shaw specifically laid out in detail the parties' dispute over his mortgage 3 account and also requested various documents from CMI including contact information for the 4 current owner of his loan, a copy of the original mortgage note and deed of trust, and copies of any 5 assignment of the mortgage note and deed of trust, if any. See Def. Trial Ex. 512-A. Similarly, the 6 January 3, 2012 e-mail to Ross references CMI's lack of response to the December 5, 2011 e-mail, 7 and again details the parties' dispute including CMI's ongoing collection attempts, and requests
8 relevant loan documents and owner information. Pl. Trial Ex. 24. Likewise, the formal letter Shaw 9 sent to Ross on January 20, 2012, contained similar information about the parties' dispute and 10 requested loan documents and contract information for the owner of his loan. Pl. Trial Ex. 26, 11 P00067-69. Finally, the January 29, 2013 e-mail contained similar dispute information and 12 demanded documentation from CMI. Such communications constitute Qualified Written Requests
13 under RESPA. Pettie, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4149, at *6; Banayan v. OneWest Bank F.S.B., 2012
14 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 35301, at *15 (finding that a letter which contained "an extremely detailed 15 account of various communications between the two parties" constitutes a qualified written 16 request).

17 Now that the court has found that four of Shaw's written communications were Qualified 18 Written Requests sufficient to trigger CMI's investigation and response duties under RESPA, the 19 court must determine whether CMI's response to those requests, if any, was in accordance with its 20 duties under RESPA. Initially, the court finds that CMI did not even respond to or acknowledge 21 Shaw's December 5, 2011 Qualified Written Request. This lack of acknowledgment of the request 22 is, itself, a violation of RESPA. See 12 U.S.C. §2605(e)(1)(A) (stating that a loan servicer "shall 23 provide a written response acknowledging receipt of the correspondence . . ."). CMI's failure to 24 acknowledge receipt of Shaw's Qualified Written Request, as evidenced by the January 3, 2012 e-25 mail to Ross which references CMI's lack of response, was a direct violation of its duties under 26 RESPA.

1 The court finds that CMI likewise violated its duties under RESPA as it relates to the 2 January 3, 2012 Qualified Written Request. Although Dana Ross properly acknowledged this 3 request in a January 5, 2012 e-mail to Shaw, CMI did not appropriately respond to the request after 4 the investigation period. The evidence establishes that CMI's only response to Shaw's January 3, 5 2012 Qualified Written Request was a January 9, 2012 letter advising Shaw that non-party Aurora
6 was the current owner of his residential loan and provided contact information for Aurora. Pl. Trial
7 Ex. 25, P00066. However, at no point within sixty (60) days after receiving Shaw's request did 8 CMI provide any of the loan documents that had been requested. CMI's failure to provide these 9 documents to Shaw is a direct violation of RESPA. Pettie, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4149, at *7.

10 After receiving CMI's January 9, 2012 letter identifying Aurora as the current owner of his 11 loan, Shaw contacted Aurora at the contact information provided by CMI. Aurora advised Shaw 12 that it was not the owner of his loan at which point Shaw again contacted CMI as outlined in his 13 January 20, 2012 Qualified Written Request. See Pl. Trial Ex. 26, P00067-69. Similar to Shaw's 14 December 3, 2011 request, CMI did not acknowledge receipt of Shaw's January 20, 2012 request.
15 As addressed above, this failure by CMI is a violation of its duties under RESPA. 12 U.S.C.
16 §2605(e)(1)(A). Further, the only response to Shaw's request was a February 13, 2012 letter from 17 CMI again identifying non-party Aurora as the owner of Shaw's residential loan. Pl. Trial Ex. 31, 18 P00099. However, by that point Shaw had already informed CMI that Aurora was not the owner of 19 his residential loan. Thus, the information CMI provided, stating that Aurora was the current owner 20 of his loan, was false information. CMI's failure to provide Shaw correct contact information for 21 the owner of his loan is an express violation of RESPA. See 12 U.S.C. §2605(k)(1)(D) (stating that 22 a loan servicer shall provide "the identity, address, and other relevant contact information about the 23 owner of assignee of the loan" when requested by the borrower). Further, once again, at no point 24 did CMI provide Shaw with any of the loan documents that he had been requesting since December 25 5, 2011. As addressed above, this is also a violation of RESPA. Pettie, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26 4149, at *7.

1 Shaw's last Qualified Written Request was his January 29, 2013 Qualified Written Request.
2 Attorney Joseph Bleeker, CMI's counsel of record at that time, acknowledged Shaw's request
3 within the twenty day time period and stated that CMI would be responding to Shaw's request 4 within the requisite sixty (60) days time period. See Pl. Trial Ex. 39, P00123-124. Further, in 5 contrast to CMI's prior responses, or lack of responses to Shaw's requests, CMI sent Shaw a 6 package on March 6, 2013, from Kristin Dennis, a Default Research Specialist at CMI. Pl. Trial Ex.
7 43, P00139-187. The court has reviewed CMI's response and finds that it properly and 8 appropriately complied with its duties under RESPA. The package included copies of all of the 9 documents that Shaw requested, provided a detailed explanation for CMI's actions on Shaw's 10 mortgage account, and explained the reasons for any lacking information. As such, the court finds 11 that CMI did not violate RESPA as it relates to Shaw's January 29, 2013 Qualified Written 12 Request. See, e.g., Pettie, 2009 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 4149, at *7.

13 Based on the evidence presented at trial, the court has found that CMI violated RESPA on 14 three separate occasions when dealing with Shaw's various Qualified Written Requests. A plaintiff 15 who establishes that a servicer violated RESPA is entitled to recover "any actual damages" that the 16 plaintiff suffered as a result of the defendant's violation and statutory damages. 12 U.S.C.
17 §2605(f)(1)(A) & (1)(B). RESPA's "actual damages" are limited to pecuniary damages. Zeich v.
18 Select Portfolio Servicing, Inc., 2015 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 151519, at *5 (D. Or. 2015). Here, Shaw
19 has not proven any actual damages as a result of CMI's violations of RESPA. In contrast to Shaw's 20 claim for tortious breach of the implied covenants, under RESPA a plaintiff "cannot recover for 21 worry, concern, or frustration." Id. Thus, the court finds that Shaw is not entitled to any actual 22 damages. Instead, Shaw's damages award for CMI's violations is limited to statutory damages.
23 Under RESPA, statutory damages may not exceed $2,000.00. 12 U.S.C. §2605(f)(1)(B). Here, the 24 court finds that such a statutory maximum is warranted based on the repeated pattern of CMI's 25 failure to appropriately respond to Shaw's Qualified Written Requests and the fact that Shaw was 26 never once provided correct contact information for the owner of his residential loan. Accordingly,

1 the court shall enter judgment in the amount of $6,000.00 favor of Shaw and against CMI on 2 Shaw's claims for violation of RESPA.

3 E. Intentional Interference

4 In Nevada, a claim for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage 5 requires a plaintiff establish: "(1) a prospective contractual relationship between the plaintiff and a 6 third party; (2) knowledge by the defendant of the prospective relationship; (3) intent to harm the 7 plaintiff by preventing the relationship; (4) the absence of privilege or justification by the 8 defendant; and (5) actual harm to the plaintiff as a result of the defendants' conduct." Fagin v. Doby
9 George, LLC, 2011 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 86389, at *15 (D. Nev. 2011) (citing Wichinsky v. Mosa, 847
10 P.2d 727, 729-30 (Nev. 1993)); see also Barket v. Clarke, 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 88097 (D. Nev.
11 2012).

12 The court has reviewed the evidence submitted at trial in this matter and finds that Shaw has 13 failed to prove his claim for intentional interference with prospective economic advantage by a 14 preponderance of the evidence. Shaw's claim for intentional interference with prospective 15 economic advantage relates solely to CMI's alleged failure to approve a short sale of the McFaul 16 Court property in a timely manner, which stigmatized the property for potential buyers and caused a 17 devaluation of the property. Although it is undisputed that Shaw had entered into four (4) separate 18 short sale contracts on the McFaul Court property with two different parties, the Knapps and the 19 Smiths, and that CMI had knowledge of these short sale agreements because Shaw had forwarded 20 all four accepted short sale offers to CMI, the court finds that Shaw has not proven that CMI
21 intended to harm Shaw by either denying the short sale offers or not responding to the short sale 22 offers in a timely manner. At trial, Shaw only established that CMI did not respond to any of the 23 four short sale offers in a timely manner thereby causing all four offers to expire under their terms.
24 However, Shaw failed to provide any evidence that CMI's delay was specifically intended to cause 25 the proposed buyers to walk away from the McFaul Court property or to cause harm to Shaw.

26 ///

1 Further, the court finds that Shaw has not proven that CMI, as the servicer of his loan who 2 had final approval on all short sales of the property, was not justified in its conduct. Initially, the 3 court notes that CMI was justified in any delay in its responses to the two Knapp Offers because 4 Shaw did not provide all necessary documents to CMI for it to properly evaluate and respond to 5 these offers. It is undisputed that after receiving the first Knapp Offer, CMI requested various 6 documentation from Shaw including: (1) a hardship letter; (2) a signed purchase agreement (as the 7 original offer had expired in late February 2013); (3) Shaw's tax returns for the tax years 2011 and 8 2012; (4) all payoffs for the junior liens on the property within the last sixty days, if any; or, (5) if 9 the junior liens still needed to be paid off, then approval letters of the short sale by each junior lien
10 holder and releases of their junior liens; (6) the 2011 real estate tax bill for the McFaul Court 11 property; and (7) a hazard insurance policy on the property. Def. Trial Ex. 525-A. Shaw submitted, 12 and re-submitted, all requested documents except for signed releases from the junior lien holders.
13 Shaw testified at trial that he had prepared appropriate junior lien holder releases including a 14 consent to judgment in favor of non-party Katherine Barkley and a stipulated monetary judgment in 15 favor of non-party Janice Shaw so that CMI could evaluate the Knapp Offers. However, both 16 Katherine Barkley and Janice Shaw testified that they did not have any conversations with Shaw 17 regarding the various short sale offers on the McFaul Court property, had not agreed to any short 18 sale offers on the property, and had not agreed to release their junior liens or signed any paperwork 19 releasing their junior liens. Further, Shaw did not provide the "judgment" documents to CMI and 20 CMI never received any release documents signed by the junior lien holders. Accordingly, the court 21 finds that CMI did not have any duty to approve, or even respond to, the Knapp Offers in a timely 22 manner as Shaw failed to provide all required documents.

23 As to the first and second Smith Offers, the court finds that Shaw was not required to 24 provide any releases from the junior lien holders for CMI to consider these short sale offers because 25 under both offers, the junior lien holders were being paid in full. However, the court finds that 26 because CMI had final authority to approve the short sales, Shaw has not established that under the 1 short sales he had reasonable expectations of any economic advantage under these offers.

2 Generally, a loan servicer like CitiMortgage has no duty to approve a short sale. See Blanford v.
3 Suntrust Mortgage, Inc., 2012 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 141666, at *11 (D. Nev. 2012). Further, as the 4 servicer of Shaw's loan, all short sale offers had to be approved by CMI, thus, even though Shaw 5 accepted the short sale offers, he did not have any true prospective economic benefit from these 6 offers. For example, if CMI declined both Smith Offers, then Shaw would not have received any 7 economic benefit as a matter of law because the McFaul Court property could not be sold at an 8 amount less than Shaw's remaining indebtedness without CMI's permission. The court cannot now 9 say that simply because CMI took no action on the offers, rather than deny them outright, that Shaw
10 would have received an economic benefit. As CMI had no duty to respond,¹⁷ a lack of response 11 which caused the offers to lapse would constitute the same action as a denial and thus, not be 12 actionable for an intentional interference with prospective economic advantage. As CMI has no 13 duty to approve, act on, or even acknowledge any short sale offers Shaw received on the McFaul 14 Court property, the court finds that Shaw has failed to prove he had a prospective economic 15 advantage under the contracts as the determination of whether to allow the property to be sold at 16 short sale was solely within CMI's control. Further, the testimony at trial establishes that the two 17 Smith Offers were not reasonable short sale offers, such that the court cannot find that CMI's lack 18 of response on these offers was designed to intentionally cause harm to Shaw or was not justified.
19 At trial, Attorney Dodrill testified that CMI would not have approved either Smith Offer as both 20

21 ¹⁷ At trial, Shaw argued that CMI created a duty to respond to the Smith Offers in a timely manner by 22 specifically requesting that Shaw re-list the McFaul Court property for sale and forward all accepted short sale
23 offers directly to Attorney Colt Dodrill, CMI's counsel of record at that point. However, the court has reviewed 24 the evidence submitted at trial and finds that it does not support Shaw's argument or interpretation of the 25 December conversation that Shaw had with Attorney Dodrill. Attorney Dodrill testified that he told Shaw that 26 if he accepted any short sale offers on the McFaul Court property that such offers should be submitted directly to him as counsel of record for CMI, but did not tell Shaw to put the property back up for sale or that he would be able to handle any short sale offers. Instead, Attorney Dodrill testified that Shaw needed to submit any offers to him directly because by that point in time, Shaw had initiated litigation against CMI and was not allowed to directly contact CMI as an adverse party. Thus, the court finds that based on this testimony, CMI did not create a specific duty to respond to the Smith Offers.

1 offers proposed to pay off both junior lien holders in full and give Shaw $75,000 while CMI lost 2 roughly $500,000 in the sale of the McFaul Court property. Attorney Dodrill further testified that 3 CMI had never approved a short sale in such a situation and that no short sale offer which allowed 4 for the borrower to receive money would be approved. Therefore, the court finds that CMI was 5 justified in not responding to these short sale offers as such offers were not reasonable offers for the 6 purchase of the property. Accordingly, based on all of the evidence presented at trial, the court 7 finds that Shaw has not established by a preponderance of the evidence that CMI engaged in 8 conduct that intentionally interfered with any prospective economic advantage. The court shall 9 enter judgment in favor of CMI and against Shaw on this claim.

10 F. Punitive Damages

11 In his second amended complaint, Shaw seeks punitive damages for CMI's conduct 12 outlined in this action. ECF No. 109. Punitive damages are not available in contract-based claims.
13 See NRS §42.005(1) (stating that punitive damages are available in any action "for the breach of an 14 obligation not arising from contract"). Thus, the only claim for which punitive damages could be 15 awarded in this action is Shaw's claim for tortious breach of the implied covenants of good faith 16 and fair dealing.

17 Under Nevada law, in order to recover punitive damages, a plaintiff must show the 18 defendant acted with oppression, fraud or malice. Pioneer Chlor Alkali Co. v. National Union Fire
19 Ins. Co., 863 F.Supp. 1237, 1250 (D. Nev. 1994). Oppression is a conscious disregard for the rights 20 of others constituting cruel and unjust hardship. Id. at 1251 (citing Ainsworth v. Combined Ins. Co.
21 of America, 763 P.2d 673, 675 (Nev. 1988)). "Conscious disregard" is defined as "the knowledge 22 of the probable harmful consequences of a wrongful act and a willful and deliberate failure to act to 23 avoid those consequences." NRS §42.001(1). Malice is conduct which is intended to injure a 24 person or despicable conduct which is engaged in with a conscious disregard of the rights and 25 safety of others. See NRS §42.005(1). In order to establish that a defendant's conduct constitutes 26 conscious disregard, the conduct must at a minimum "exceed mere recklessness or gross

1 negligence.” Pioneer Chlor Alkali Co., 863 F.Supp. at 1251; see also Countrywide Home Loans,
2 Inc. v. Thitchener, 192 P.3d 243, 255 (Nev. 2008) (holding that conscious disregard requires a 3 “culpable state of mind” and therefore “denotes conduct that, at a minimum, must exceed mere 4 recklessness or gross negligence.”).

5 Based upon the substantial factual history in this action, and recognizing that CMI is a large 6 home loan servicing company, the court finds by clear and convincing evidence that CMI’s 7 business practices and its specific conduct toward Shaw constituted oppression and a conscious 8 disregard for Shaw’s rights warranting punitive damages. Given the fact that Shaw’s debt of over 9 $900,000 was for his home, that a home is most Americans greatest asset and also greatest liability 10 and is such an integral part of any homeowner’s personal well being, the court finds that a 11 homeowner is particularly vulnerable as a result of a tortious breach of the implied covenant of 12 good faith and fair dealing oppressively committed by a large corporate servicing company such as 13 CMI.

14 Here, there was a willful and unconscionable failure to avoid needless and harmful 15 consequences in refusing to honor or recognize the May 2011 Modification Agreement (executed 16 by CMI’s Vice-President in May 2011). CMI’s conduct in recognizing then continuously 17 disavowing that agreement - despite a resolving document from CMI’s Assistant General Counsel - 18 was made with a conscious disregard for the harm that it was causing Shaw. Further, there was a 19 willful and deliberate failure by CMI to avoid these consequences. Accordingly, the court finds that 20 this is an appropriate case for punitive damages.

21 The court has already cited many of the factors that support the court’s finding within the 22 findings of fact and tortious breach of the implied covenants section of this order and those factors 23 find equal weight here. But, the court now highlights several factors which particularly stand out in 24 support of punitive damages and which have not been more specifically addressed. These include 25 CMI’s lack of policies, procedures, practices and management oversight in handling mortgage 26 account issues such as Shaw’s. The lack of company policies and management oversight in this

1 action allowed CMI, through its Loss Mitigation, underwriting, and Executive Response Unit 2 departments, to take the offensive position that CMI was entitled to require Shaw to abandon the 3 fully executed May 2011 Modification Agreement in favor of the proposed July 2011 Modification 4 Agreement despite upper management and assistant general counsel taking inconsistent and 5 contrary positions. In essence, CMI chose to ignore its own agreement (and its own corporate 6 counsel) because the company was aware that a financially strapped homeowner who was in default 7 on a home loan during the post-recession economic downturn was in no position to hold CMI to the 8 agreement it had unilaterally chosen to ignore. Given the obvious effects such a position would 9 have upon any borrower/homeowner and the lack of any bargaining position to challenge CMI's 10 position, it is clear that there would be dramatic and harmful consequences to a borrower which 11 would cause feelings of utter frustration, worthlessness, and shame - shame and fear over losing a 12 home - at the very time that the borrower was likely experiencing an insurmountable burden of 13 debt. A non-attorney borrower would likely have caved in to CMI while an attorney like Shaw 14 chose instead to rely upon his contract, though not without obvious compensable injury.

15 Beyond the above, the court also finds that there was a serious lack of practices, policies 16 and procedures to deal with and explain the company's positions and actions to the 17 borrower/homeowner. Here, despite repeated requests for information as to why Shaw received 18 contradictory and inconsistent communications, CMI never provided any meaningful explanations.
19 Moreover, CMI's responses to Shaw's requests for identification of his loan holder, including both 20 those that qualified under RESPA and those that did not qualify, show a lack of policy and 21 procedure to identify to a borrower/homeowner the creditor (whom CMI was representing) who 22 owned the loan and how the creditor might be contacted. These are just a few examples of CMI's 23 lack of centralized management policy and speak to the very core of CMI's conscious disregard of 24 Shaw's rights. Significantly, even after going through a full trial, there has been no identification by 25 CMI of the owner of Shaw's loan.

26 ///

1 CMI's failures in this action are exacerbated by the frustration and unexplained revolving 2 door of CMI personnel with whom Shaw was required to deal. Just during the time period from 3 May 2011 through July 2012 when CMI effectively stopped communication with Shaw concerning 4 his mortgage account, Shaw had dealt with two different individuals who had drafted separate 5 modification agreements (Kim Vukovich and Juan Mayorga), three separate Homeowner Support 6 Specialists (Chris Gabbert, Jennifer Butler, and Robert Orcutt), and CMI's Assistant General
7 Counsel, Dana Ross, not to mention the myriad of unnamed employees Shaw contacted in 2011 8 through 2012. And there was commonly no meaningful explanation of why a new person, new 9 department, or some other representative was being identified as the person with whom Shaw was 10 now required to deal. Moreover, the evidence established that Shaw informed each new CMI 11 representative of the history of his mortgage account and rather than investigate the matter further - 12 an investigation readily available through Shaw's electronic mortgage account and the documents
13 in Shaw's and CMI's possession - these representatives continued to push forward with CMI's 14 untenable position that there was no valid and binding loan modification under the May 2011
15 Modification Agreement. CMI willfully ignored the harm it was causing to Shaw despite clear 16 warning signs from Shaw that its conduct was improper.

17 Another failure, previously mentioned, was CMI's inexcusably delayed recognition of the 18 May 2011 Modification Agreement. An agreement executed by its Vice-President but then rejected 19 by some employee in the Loss Mitigation department only to be honored by CMI's own assistant 20 general counsel and then rejected again by an employee in the Executive Response Unit without 21 any meaningful explanation to the borrower/homeowner and without any regard for the financial 22 burden, frustration and stress such inconsistency placed on the borrower/homeowner is strong 23 evidence of oppression. After three plus years of litigation and a three-day bench trial, an 24 explanation for CMI's behavior is still unknown.

25 Also significant to the court in finding that punitive damages are warranted in this action is 26 the effect of CMI's actions and lack of actions concerning Shaw's credit status. While it is clear

1 that he was in default on his original loan, it is also clear that he cured the default through the 2 execution of the May 2011 Modification Agreement which subsumed all past due amounts into a 3 new principal balance, made all payments under that agreement in a timely fashion through 4 December 2011, and yet Shaw received negative and unreliable credit reporting by CMI throughout 5 much of this period and afterward. Although the evidence could not show the reasons for the 6 revocation of Shaw's credit card, and the denial for Shaw's credit applications for his daughter's 7 student loans, the rejection of the credit application for the purchase of his son's automobile, and 8 the rejection of Shaw's own automobile purchase, it is a reasonable conclusion that CMI's negative 9 reporting during the periods of time when the default had been cleared contributed to Shaw's credit 10 problems, particularly when his only negative credit issues were related to his mortgage, and would 11 have been a factor in the shame, embarrassment, stress and frustration suffered by Shaw over the 12 relevant time period. Taking all of these factors together, they demonstrate that CMI acted with 13 conscious disregard of Shaw's rights and support an award of punitive damages.

14 In Nevada, an award of punitive damages is limited to "[t]hree times the amount of 15 compensatory damages awarded to the plaintiff if the amount of compensatory damages is 16 $100,000 or more." NRS §42.005(a). Here, the compensatory damages under Shaw's tortious 17 breach of the implied covenants claim is $239,850.00 and the court finds that an appropriate 18 amount of punitive damages for the conduct outlined above is the statutory limit. Thus, trebling this 19 amount, the court shall enter judgment in the amount of $719,550.00 in favor of Shaw and against 20 CMI for punitive damages.

21 G. Attorney's Fees

22 Although not presently before the court, the court notes for the benefit of the parties that it 23 would consider a motion for attorney's fees filed by Shaw pursuant to NRS §18.010 and 12 U.S.C.
24 §2605(f)(3), as Shaw is the prevailing party in this action under his declaratory relief, tortious 25 breach of the implied covenants, and RESPA claims. Therefore, the court shall grant Shaw leave to
